CHINA MUST MEET TERMS BEFORE CASH IS ADVANCED

Consortium Won't Pay Until Government Is Formed

CITES OLD CASE

Insists On Observation Of Obligation In Hukwang Loan

OLD HSU SAFE

Plays Victors Against Each Other And Keeps Power To Himself

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, August 11.—The Consortium has definitely refused to make any advance whatsoever to China until a formal government has been properly organised, which can give assurance that the administration will meet with the terms of the Consortium.

Not even tentative advances will be made before an organisation exists which will assure the supervision of the expenditure or distribution of the money lent.

Among other terms of the group of bankers as originally planned are the use of the money for no military purposes, for the disbandment of troops and for the carrying out of the general reorganisation program. The Consortium demands that a joint body of representatives of the interested financiers be empowered to supervise the distribution of the funds.

DISCUSS OBLIGATIONS

The Consortium, in its declaration, also insisted on the observation on the part of China of the obligations, arising out of the Hukwang Bond Loan, which was contracted before the war with Germany as one of the interested powers.

After the declaration of war by China against Germany, China held that the share held by Germans became null and void, while the Consortium was inclined to ask China to observe her obligations as most of the bonds had fallen into the hands of other nationals.

Considerable delay has been caused in the formation of the Cabinet on account of the disagreement between Tsao Kun and Chang Tso-lin over the Communications portfolio. Chang favors Yeh Kung-tso, whom Tsao Kun opposes vigorously.

TO PATCH UP SPLIT

The adherents of both Tsao and Chang, while admitting a split with General Wu Pei-fu, state that the break can be patched up in time, further state that the time is not yet ripe for the idealistic measures proposed by General Wu Pei-fu, such as the calling of a national citizens' convention, the abolition of the Tuchunate and the disbandment of troops.

The adherents however denied that there was a split between Tsao Kun and Chang Tso-lin. There was only a minor disagreement over small matters.

WU DISGUSTED

The truth of the matter is that Wu Pei-fu left Peking in disgust while Chang and Tsao are now squabbling over the appointment of their henchmen to the various offices.

Old Hsu, on the other hand, is playing with all and playing one off another to keep the balance of power in his own hands.

MORE TOKIO DENIALS

Tokio, August 11.—The following statement has been issued by the Foreign Office:

"The North China Daily News on August 3 published an article by Rodney Gilbert, its special correspondent at Peking, giving an account of an interview he had had with General Wu Pei-fu.

"Among other things, the General was represented as stating that he was convinced of the truth of the reports that Japanese volunteers had participated in the struggle and that he had reason to believe that thirty of these had been killed or wounded, all being dressed as Chinese soldiers.

CHARGES FREQUENT

"Charges of this kind have so persistently been brought against Japan, that it would not have been considered worth while to publish any more denials, if this

Biggest Little Man In Shanghai Quits White Lights

Foreigners and Chinese alike mourn the passing of 'Piccolo,' the quaint little Chinese figure who—through the years that he was an attendant at the now defunct German Club and later as cigarette salesman at the Astor House became one of the characters of Shanghai, remembered probably in all parts of the world.

'Piccolo' was just about three feet tall and he weighed maybe fifty pounds, but with his cigarette tray he carried about with him a hundred-candle-power smile that endeared him to all the patrons of the Astor House of recent years. This may explain why so ready a response was given when some unnamed friend started a subscription list to aid his family.

Yes, 'Piccolo' was a family man though the diminutive Chinese was believed by most who knew him to be merely a child, he was in fact a man of 28 years, married and besides his widow he is survived by two children.

The subscription list had reached a total of upwards $300 yesterday and the money is to be turned over to the bereaved family. The time of the funeral is to be announced later.

GOURAUD GIVEN WARM WELCOME AT DAMASCUS

Populace Shows Sympathy For French Upon Arrival Of General

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, August 10.—According to a telegram from Damascus General Gouraud entered the city on Saturday. He was formally received by General Goybet, commanding the French division, stationed there, and by the members of the French Missions.

General Gouraud was cordially received by the representatives of the people and of the Provisional Government, headed by Alladin Bey Doubi, as well as the principal officials and notables of the city and the heads of the great families, who crowded round the station to see him arrive.

DECORATIONS PRESENTED

Detachments of the former Sherif's army were present and, with a French guard of honor, gave the salute.

A review was subsequently held and the general presented decorations to the officers and men who had distinguished themselves in the recent fighting.

PEOPLE FOR FRANCE

The population are openly showing their sympathy for the French.

After an imposing march past of troops, General Gouraud was received at the former residence of the Emir Feisul, in the center of the city, which was befagged for the occasion.

Forcible Removal Fate Of Churchman Who Defied Nation

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 9.—The White Star liner Baltic arrived at Liverpool this afternoon. Passengers declare that Archbishop Mannix was forcibly taken off by a boarding party from a warship at four o'clock in the morning.

It is declared that Archbishop Mannix will not be allowed to go to Liverpool, Manchester or Glasgow.

London, August 9.—The Liverpool police announce that instructions have been received from London that Archbishop Mannix shall not be allowed to land in Liverpool, although the liner Baltic arrives in the Mersey this evening.

MAY BE TRANSHIPPED

It appears, therefore, that the government intends to tranship the archbishop at sea and to convey him to an unknown spot, from which, it is stated, he will, unless he is made prisoner, immediately proceed to Liverpool.

Queenstown last night, from the water's edge to the tower of the Cathedral, was blazing with rows of candles and electric lights, and the Cathedral bells were pealing "Come back to Erin."

TO RESTORE ORDER

London, August 9.—The Restoration of Order in Ireland Bill passed the second reading in the House of Lords today.

In the course of the debate an elderly gentleman from a place allotted to Privy Councillors created a mild sensation by exclaiming: "If you pass this bill, you may kill England, but not Ireland," and then walking out of the House.

It is understood that the interrupter was an Irish Privy Councillor named Carlisle.

London, August 9.—The Evening Standard claims to have documentary evidence that the Sinn Fein Congress of June last authorised De Valera to expend $500,000 in connection with the Presidency campaign in the United States and also authorised the expenditure of $1,000,000 to obtain United States recognition of the tire and retired.

SHAW REBELS' ANTUNG AGENT, JAPS CHARGE

Irishman Arrested At Chosen For Futhering Rebellion Against Nipponese

HIS HOUSE CALLED FORT

Prisoner Alleged To Have Been Go-Between For Shanghai Cabinet

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Seoul, August 10.—The police today issued an explanatory statement concerning the arrest of Mr. George L. Shaw of Antung on July 11. The statement says:

"Mr. Shaw, who is an Irishman, used to declare his sympathy with the Korean malcontents, gave them shelter in his house and also established in his house a bureau for communication with Shanghai and made it a base for carrying on plots.

"The house was known among the Korean outlaws as the invincible fortress of Antung.

"Mr. Shaw used his steamers for bringing bombs, pistols and inflammatory documents to Chosen from Shanghai.

"As a result of the arrest of several Korean outlaws on the frontier, evidence of Mr. Shaw's offense was obtained. Mr. Shaw was very cautious and rarely left his house but he entered Chosen on July 11 to meet his Japanese wife, returning from Japan, and was arrested."

JAPANESE QUERIED

London, August 9.—In the House of Commons today Lieutenant-Colonel T. H. Parry asked a question with regard to the alleged attempt by Japanese police to board the British steamer, Kuilin, owned by Mr. George L. Shaw, with the object of arresting Koreans, suspected of being on board, and a subsequent attempt to raid Mr. Shaw's house for a similar purpose.

Mr. Cecil Harmsworth, undersecretary for foreign affairs, replied that the Japanese consul-general at Mukden had made a private complaint against Mr. Shaw's sympathetic attitude to Korean agitators.

It was alleged that Mr. Shaw kept one of the upper rooms of his house at Antung as an asylum for Koreans, plotting against the Japanese, and allowed Koreans to use his steamers as a means of flight and of communication with the Korean provisional government at Shanghai.

The British consul-general had consequently privately warned Mr. Shaw to be careful. The British ambassador at Tokio, who had reported fully on the subject, had not mentioned the story with regard to the alleged attempt to board the steamer or to raid Mr. Shaw's house.

House Advises Four Powers Unite In Treaty To Deal With Affairs On Pacific

Compact Of Americans, Britons, Japanese And Chinese Advocated By President's Confidant From Texas

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 9.—Colonel E. M. House, who is now in London, in an article, telegraphed to the Philadelphia Public Ledger, commends to American consideration the suggestion by "an influential English statesman" for the supersession of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty by an Anglo-American-Japanese-Chinese treaty for the purpose of avoiding friction among the Powers, principally interested in the Pacific.

He submits that no action would thereby be taken inconsistent with the League of Nations.

BAFFLING DOCUMENT

Colonel House describes the Anglo-Japanese note to the League on the agreement as an important but baffling official document, which raises wonderment with regard to the extent of its full scope. He says that American diplomacy in the Far East has centered for nearly two decades upon the clarification of relations between the two great naval Powers there and the effect thereof upon America's future in the Pacific.

Colonel House declares that a feeling of deep uneasiness has question.

He refers to the most unexpected decision by Great Britain and Japan after long, secret negotations to put the whole matter before the League of Nations in a way, frequently interpreted as tantamount to the practical abolition of the agreement, at least in the form hitherto known. Colonel House welcomes this action, declaring that the question now raised is whether the note of July 8 constitutes a new International agreement between the two nations, which must be registered.

AMERICA CURIOUS

He expresses America's curiosity to know the exact text of the old agreement and whether the joint British and Japanese action has effected a fundamental modification in it. In his opinion none of the Powers on the Council of the League will be able to force or be interested in forcing the clarification, desired by the United States. Colonel House believes it probable that "the full scope of this note, which is so vital to America's whole Far Eastern policy will, therefore, remain a mystery."

Ancient And Modern China Unite To Greet Americans

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Nanking, August 10.—Ancient and Modern China met today when the Congressional Party, grouped on the battlements of massive masonry of the Drum Tower, described by Marco Polo, gazed over the campus of the beautiful Nanking University, where 20 parked automobiles waited to convey them to the yamen of Tuchun Li Shun, Governor-General of Kiangsu, for an official welcome.

The party was greeted at the station by high officials, a military guard of honor, boy scouts and hundreds of boy and girl students, waving banners. It was a most spectacular and picturesque sight.

TIFFIN-BANQUET

An elaborate tiffin-banquet at the Tuchun's yamen was followed by a reception by the teachers' College, at which Dr. Kwo, President of the Returned Students' Society and also of the China-America Society, welcomed the visitors. Three thousand students and prominent residents of Nanking attended the reception, which was held in a specially-erected mat and bamboo auditorium, measuring seventy by one hundred and twenty yards.

Dr. Kwo, in the course of his speech, appealed for continued American support against attempts to infringe the integrity of China, specifying Japan as the aggressor.

Mr. Porter, Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives, responded, saying that China's territorial integrity should be respected, while Chinese energy should place the nation among the first powers in the world. China, he continued, must develop education in order to succeed in the task, devolving upon such students as he was then addressing, for China's future in their hands.

AMERICAN CAMPAIGN

Mr. Porter declared that he was returning home, determined on a campaign to convince his colleagues in America that America should raise the Peking Legation to the rank of an Embassy, thus recognising the greatness and importance of China. American foreign policy, he said, was not comprehended by many of the statesmen of the Old World, who did not grasp that her policy was based upon peace and help and not upon conquest. America was pledged to help China as far as international obligations permitted and, concluded Mr. Porter, "America never breaks her word."

A banquet will be given tonight in honor of the Congressional Party by the Provincial Assembly.

The party is being housed in the dormitories of Nanking University.

In spite of the intense heat the Congressmen are absorbing much information and collecting data on trade and politics for home study.

MORTALITY RATE IN JULY IS LOW

The current Municipal Gazette records that the mortality rate for July, both among foreigners and Chinese, was remarkably low with almost a complete absence of cases of dysentery. Both foreign and Chinese Isolation hospitals were practically empty through the month, though preparations had been made to meet an expected outbreak of choleraic diarrhoea.

Nineteen Chinese cases were reported within the limits of the International Settlement in the past half of the month by the two special summer diseases hospitals and by the Chinese Isolation Hospital. On July 26 two authentic cases of Asiatic cholera were reported by St. Luke's Hospital and a third case later was reported, but none terminated fatally.

SUIT IS BEGUN BY MEDICAL FIRM

A petition was filed yesterday in the United States Court for China by the medical firm of Doctors S. A. Ransom, Lionel Street and A. M. Massey against Dr. Paul S. Martin seeking to enjoin Doctor Martin from practising medicine for a period of five years within 100 miles of Nanking Road and The Bund. The petition is based upon an alleged breach of contract.

It is set forth in the petition that Doctor Martin entered into a contract on Feburary 1 last as an employe of the firm at a remuneration of Mex. $400 a month with certain other fees and payments and it is alleged that in violation of the terms of this contract he left the firm on June 9 and set up a separate practice. In an accompanying petition an accounting is asked in connection with payments made to Doctor Martin.

Poles Ready To Accept Any Reasonable Terms From Bolsheviki Army

Armistice Conference To Begin At Once With Intention Of Saving World From Being Plunged Again Into War; Diplomats Are Anxious Over Outcome Of Negotiations

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, August 10.—The first meeting between the Russian and Polish representatives, entrusted with the armistice negotiations, will take place at Minsk tomorrow.

"If the Bolshevik delegates really offer Poland reasonable conditions, guaranteeing her territorial integrity and political independence," writes the Petit Parisien, "the attitude of the Allies will necessarily be modified; but, in the negative case, the Allies on the contrary will by common accord take the protective measures against the Soviet which are demonstrably necessary.

"An effective blockade of Russia will be assured by the British fleet, with the co-operation of French torpedo-boats, particularly in the Baltic.

"The states which are close neighbors of Russia, namely Sweden, Norway and Denmark, will be requested not to send their produce to Russia and to assist in combating the world-danger of Bolshevism.

A further measure will consist in opposing a defensive front to Soviet Russia, by appealing to the aid of the states which have seceded from the former Russian Empire.

"General Wrangel's army, which is already being supported by the French government, will also receive support from the British government, which will send war material.

AID FOR POLISH ARMY

"It goes without saying that Poland will receive from the Allied governments material and moral assistance to second her efforts to maintain her independence.

"Even if the Dansig corridor were cut by the Bolsheviki, the despatch of material could be effected through Czecho-Slovakia.

"Finally, if the Soviets remain obdurate in their provocative and uncompromising attitude, Krassin and Kamenev [illegible] requested to leave London within a week."

POLES GET ORDERS

London, August 10.—The latest Polish communique is continuing. It states that, in the neighborhood of Drobiczyn, the Poles are gaining ground and have succeeded in driving enemy detachments, which had crossed the River Bug, back to the north bank after particularly fierce fighting.

On the River Sereth, Bolshevik attacks were repulsed, while Ukrainian detachments are successfully continuing a counter-attack.

The communique states that the town of Brody has been completely sacked by the Bolsheviki.

U. S. NOTE DELIVERED

Paris, August 9.—The American note with regard to the Russian situation was delivered to the French Foreign Office today.

POLES HOLD POSITIONS

London, August 8.—A Warsaw communique, dated yesterday, states that the advance of the Bolsheviks in the direction of Warsaw, Grodno and Bielostok has been stopped and that the Poles are steadily holding their positions on the left bank of the River Bug, where heavy fighting is proceeding.

The Poles have evacuated Lemda on the northern front.

POLISH COMMUNIQUE

Warsaw, August 10.—The following communique is issued by the Polish General Staff today:

"Bolshevik cavalry detachments, continuing to press the Polish forces along the railway line in the direction of Mlawa, occupied Ciechanow for a short time.

"North of Brody the Bolsheviks are actively attacking. Extending their action, the Poles have thrown back the Bolsheviks from Radziejewo (Radzivilov?). In this attack the Poles captured a battery of artillery and machine-guns. They defeated the Bolsheviki, although the latter were superior in numbers, and took 400 prisoners."

POSITION CONFUSED

London, August 9.—"The position is confused" epitomises the Russo-Polish situation, resulting from the Bolsheviks' summary brushing aside of the Allies' proposals. The Poles' acceptance of the Bolshevik terms for a conference has introduced a feature, which, in view of the absence of explanations from Polish quarters, is momentarily baffling but may mean that the Bolsheviki have offered some tempting bait to the Poles to accept direct negotiations.

The Times says that it would be easy to point out how Mr. Lloyd George's "optimistic opportunism has led to this disastrous situation, from which a graceful exit is almost impossible to imagine." The

CANADA LIKES PRESENT STATE, ASSERTS PARKER

Author Tells Editors That People Of Dominion Are Satisfied

(Reuter's Service)

Ottawa, August 7.—At today's meeting of the Imperial Press Conference Sir Gilbert Parker declared that Imperial partnership had long been founded upon consent and that, if Canada desired to withdraw from it, no gun would be fired to prevent her but, he added, the granting of responsible his confidence that an unwritten constitution for the whole Empire would be gradually evolved.

An interesting discussion ensued on the question of paper supplies, which ended in the adoption of a resolution, calling for the appointment of a standing committee to take steps to ensure adequate supplies of paper throughout the Empire. Representative paper manufacturers promised to consider the suggestion for a larger allotment of paper to Africa.

TO EXTEND ACTIVITIES

Ottawa, August 8.—At the concluding sitting of the Imperial Press Conference today, a resolution was passed in favor of admitting weekly newspapers, and literary, trade and technical journals to the Empire Press Union.

Another resolution was passed, declaring that benefit would result from the provision of opportunities for interchange of staffs between British and Dominion newspapers with the object of increasing efficiency in handling information from different parts of the Empire and of affording a means of exchange of ideas with regard to newspaper organisation.

Prizes Offered For Airplane Safety

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, August 10.—The French press announces that the "Union for Airplane Safety" has devoted a sum of 10,000 (?) francs for 1920 to be awarded as prizes to inventors of a device for increasing the safety of heavier-than-air machines.

Paris, August 10.—The Treaty of Peace with Turkey was signed this afternoon at the National Porcelain factory at Sevres. M. Millerand presided.

journal urges close co-operation between Great Britain and France against the "Russo-German plot for the formation of a continental system more grandiose even than Napoleon's."

ALARMS GRAVITY.

The Daily Chronicle admits the gravity of the situation but feels sure that no peaceable measures will be neglected to bring the Bolsheviki to a reasonable view.

The Daily News throws the blame upon France and expresses the opinion that, if the decision rested with Great Britain, there would be peace with Russia in a fortnight.

The attitude of all sections of Labor in England is arousing considerable attention. It should be explained that Labor's uncompromisingly anti-Polish standpoint is due especially to the moderate circles and not to approval of Bolshevik ideas but to resentment of what they consider Poland's unwarranted attack upon Russia and Warsaw's insatiable lust of conquest beyond the generous boundaries, fixed by the Allies.

WILD TALK OF STRIKE

There was wild talk at various meetings throughout the country, yesterday, of a general strike to prevent war with Russia but responsible leaders discountenance such extremist tactics.

Germany, as she has done from the beginning, is doing her best to pick a quarrel with the Allies but she is not likely to be given anything approaching a plausible excuse for interference.

The Daily Express understands that Mr. Lloyd George although disappointed with the Soviet reply, is still using all his energies to prevent a declaration of war.

Paris, August 9.—The Allied troops on the East Prussian frontier are engaged in destroying and blowing up accumulations of German war material and munitions, evidently with the purpose of saving them from falling into the hands of the Bolsheviki. The Germans are complaining that the incessant explosions are alarming the population.

MILLERAND ACCLAIMED

London, August 9, 9:30 p.m. —The Hythe conference finished with a short afternoon sitting, which was held owing to the receipt of further communications from Soviet sources, after which Mr. Lloyd George and M. Millerand returned to their respective capitals. M. Millerand upon his departure was accorded an ovation.

It is officially stated that the Allies are in complete agreement with regard to the action to be taken with reference to the Polish situation, subject, however, in the case of Great Britain, to the approval of Parliament.

It is understood that the Allies are determined to support the Poles by technical advice, munitions and also possibly naval measures, but Allied troops will not be employed.

SEEK TO OBSTRUCT POLES

Furthermore it is semi-officially explained that the British government during the past three months have done their utmost to induce Russia to come to terms with a view to removing the serious condition of affairs in Eastern Europe, but the Russians appear to be determined to crush the Poles and impose upon Poland a form of government to which the great majority of Poles strongly object.

The Allies, it is pointed out, feel it to be their duty to do everything possible to enable the Poles to maintain their independence, because Poland was created by the treaty of Versailles.

Nevertheless the issue must largely depend upon the ability of the Poles themselves, with such help as the aforementioned, to repel the Russian attacks.

CONCESSION TO ENVOYS

The Minsk conference between the Poles and Russians will be held on August 11. If the Russians then indicate willingness to make reasonable terms, different considerations will apply.

It is probable that MM. Krassin and Kameneff will be permitted to remain in London until after August 11, in order that the Government may learn what occurs at Minsk. In the event of the Minsk negotiations failing, it is likely that the Government may ask MM. Krassin and Kameneff to leave Great Britain, on the ground that it is impossible to negotiate with them, while the Allies are at the same time taking steps to assist the Poles.

EXPERT WAR

London, August 9.—A Labor Conference held in the House of Commons today passed a resolution stating:

"This joint conference, representing the Trades Union Congress, the Labor Party and the Parliamentary Labor Party, feels certain that a war is being engineered between the Allied Powers and Soviet Russia over Poland. It declares that such a war would be an intolerable crime against humanity and it, therefore, warns the government that the whole industrial power of the organised workers will be used to defeat this war, that the executive committees of the affiliated organisations throughout the country will be summoned to hold themselves in readiness to proceed immediately to London for a national conference, that they will be advised to instruct their members to down tools on instructions from that national conference and that a council will immediately be constituted to take such steps as may be necessary to carry this decision into effect."

STRIKE IS THREATENED

London, August 10.—The decision of the Labor Conference is unquestionably an ultimatum to the government that a new war will mean a general strike throughout the country. A prominent member of the labor party declares that the decision is not only a threat but that it will materialise, if necessary. Considerable enthusiasm prevailed at the conference, following on the adoption of the resolution. The extreme wing urged immediate direct action but the moderates, although equally favoring a firm attitude, secured the adoption of more constitutional procedure.

For the first time in a century, outside a reservation, chiefs and matrons of the six Indian nations gathered at Okara Park, in the Adirondack Mountains, to celebrate the dedication of the 17,000 acres of Adirondack forests and lakes as a memorial to the League of the Iroquois. The most beautiful Indian women of the various reservations attended the ceremonies. In the photograph is shown a group of younger squaws, all of them daughters of chiefs and princesses in their own tribes. From left to right, the second one standing is Non-gachaha, the famous Iroquois beauty.

The total number of calls to fires, or supposed fires, during the month of June was 25, as against 27 for the corresponding month last year according to the report of Chief officer M. W. Pett. The property at risk is estimated at Tls. 1,271,000 (Foreign, Tls. 802,000; Chinese, Tls. 469,000), as against Tls. 719,000 (Foreign, Tls. 640,000; Chinese, Tls. 79,000) for the corresponding period last year.

Mustang Breaks Back Of Champion Broncho Buster

Coyote Takes Three Seconds To Unseat His One Hundred And Seventieth Victim As Thousands Of Elks Witness Contest

Chicago, July 4.—Jack Brown, the long chance rider from Lusk, Wyo., lies in St. Luke's Hospital with his back broken. Twenty thousand Elks, wives and guests, who are in Chicago for the Elks' convention, saw Coyote, a vicious mustang, throw Brown at the end of the second day of the world's championship cowboy contests in Grant Park this afternoon.

Coyote has an evil record of which he and his owner, Ed McCarthy of Cheyenne, are justly proud, for that half ton of prairie outlaw had thrown 169 of the West's toughest, and had come to Chicago to make it 170. Jack Brown had come all the way from Wyoming to end the riderless career of Coyote.

He was up against the battle of his life. He had won thousands of dollars from Western ranchmen, who had the bad judgment to pit their wild horses against his wild riding. But McCarthy also had won $18,000 in bets that no man could ride Coyote.

It was an interesting point to argue. This is the way they argued it in the middle of Grant Park: "Fog Horn" Clancy of the Texas sagebrush, whose voice, they say, can be heard in Mexico when the boys meet in Waco, got on his hind legs and let out a yell that sent shivers down the snaky back of Coyote, wrestling in the grip of five hurdies in the center of the half mile track. Jack Brown, red shirted and booted, let out an answering yell, raised his hand and vaulted in Coyote's saddle. And the five huskies did some broad jumping for the safety zone.

Three seconds was all it lasted. Coyote is a "sunfisher." That's one of those devil mustangs that knows how to shimmy. To sit on Coyote's back involves something of the same effort as might be required to ride a Marconigram on the high seas. Jack went down. "Doc" Yale of Denver was bending over him nearly as soon as he hit the ground.

"It may be a broken back," said the surgeon.

"How long did I stick?" groaned Jack Brown.

"Three seconds," he was told.

"Oh, hell," opined Brown, as he was rushed to St. Luke's.

Belgians Fired On By Chinese Police

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, August 11.—Despatches received here from Harbin state that on the night of August 1 three Belgians after dinner entered a certain street. One of them was very noisy. The Chinese police levelled their rifles and one of them fired in the air. Bystanders seized the policeman's rifle, whereupon his comrade fired. The crowd fled and the police then seized and beat the Belgians with the butts of their rifles, afterwards locking them up in the police-station. Next morning the Belgians were taken to the Kirin Bureau where they were placed in irons and only released at five o'clock, in the afternoon after repeated requests of the British Consul, who represents Belgian interests. Two of the Belgians were severely injured. The Chinese preferred no charges against them.

U. S. Flag At Westminster As Mary Reaches London

London, June 26.—Mary Pickford, who already has stirred up Great Britain fairly well, scored a new and unexpected success on the anniversary of the King's coronation. All the public buildings were beflagged, but the verger of Westminster Abbey, feeling a bit foggy, hoisted the Stars and Stripes instead of the Union Jack. The flag flew several hours before questions pouring in to the Deanery revealed the mistake. As Mary and Doug Fairbanks arrived in London that morning, Westminster and Parliament Square gurgled with delight at the supposed recognition of the world's sweethearts, but it is reported that the Dean evinced quite contrary sentiments. When asked about it, Douglas Fairbanks remarked modestly: "Well, they buried Shakespeare there, didn't they?"

American Writer Sees Villa As Robin Hood Of Mexico

He Preyed Only Upon The Rich And Pursuit Of Him Was Impossible, For He And His Bands Melted Away Like Shadows

Pancho Villa's surrender to the thorities at Mexico City seems have removed from the theater great events one of it most turesque actors. Critics probly never will agree as to Villa's al character, but what Herbert rey wrote from Chihuahua City month ago, portraying Villa as Robin Hood of modern Mexico, at least interesting in view of e retirement of the notorious ndit.

May be they'll get Villa, wrote r. Corey. Some folks think ey will. It is idle to deny that ere is a certain amount of risk ..ed in so active an outdoor life as y leads. But me, I dunno. If were selling life insurance I ould try to interest him in a enty payment policy with an nuity option.

Here's the idea. If he stood and fought as he used to fight hen he wore a naval uniform nd had a house in Juarez, just cross the river from El Paso, here might be a chance. But bregon licked him most decidedly every time they came together a big fight. So Villa is using her tactics. He is as elusive as rat in an old fashioned garret. e seems to be tiring his purers out, for, after all, most of hem have other things to do eside toil over thirsty hills in ursuit of a man you do not really ant to catch very much anyhow. he home defenders are beginning talk of going. The federal my—well, it remains to be seen st what the federal arm may do.

HE ELASTIC ARMY

Right now Villa is supposed to ave just four hundred men. wo hundred and fifty of them re with him and the remainder th one of his subordinate hiefs. That does not seem a ormidable force. But that four undred men may jump overnight o four thousand. It is in that act that Villa's chief strength es. He has an organisation that unsurpassed by any other oranisation in Mexico.

"I am more dangerous when I ave only one man with me than hen I have a brigade," he boasts. "He is a hard man to pursue," aid General Enriquez to me. nriquez, by the way, did a better ob of pursuing than anyone else ho has taken it on recently. When he is being pursued he etaches his men by ones and ros on either side of the trail. He ides on fifty yards and sends one an to one side and in another fty yards he sends another man o the other side. You cannot reak up your force to hunt down hese individuals. If you do he ould mobilise his straggiers gain and attack you—and if you ad enough men to trail the inividuals how could you tell when ou found them? Their rifles ould be hidden, their horses oosed on the prairie and they ould be hard at work."

DEATH IS COMMON

But when he wants them again e always gets them. That is the erit of his organisation. Bewen times they cost nothing to eed or maintain. He may have rdered them to meet at a certain lace at a certain time. They lways do. Apparently no trairs have wormed their way into is army, for one never hears of is being betrayed. Sometimes e tells them to go home and ork and wait until they are sent or. When they are sent for they lways come—or else they start on the American border and ride ike fire in a wheat field.

"His discipline is inflexible," aid a man who knows him well. If a man were to be sent for and refused to respond the day ould come when a little group of comrades would draw rain outside his door.

"'The jefe,' they would say, 'sent us to kill you, Antonio. Perhaps you would like to say good-by to your wife?'

"And they would sit down and wait while he said good-by and kissed his children. Then they would shoot him, with the most cordial good will and simple understanding on both sides. I have seen many freshly impressed by the stoicism with which the peon meets death. Death is so very common an incident that it hardly seems worth while to make a fuss about it."

THE PEOPLE WITH HIM

Villa is aided, too, by the fact that he has the good will of most of the people. This seems hard to understand, but it seems to be a fact. The outlook upon life of the average Mexican peasant may be guessed at from the fact that he calls himself pelado, which means "the skinned one." All his life he has been the more or less dumb and helpless victim of land owner and banker and policeman and government. Villa alone has been somewhat on his side. Not long ago Villa rode into a village in which a friend of mine happened to be. He heard the men in the stable yard of the little village in talking among themselves:

"'Ours' are here this morning," they said to each other. Villa was "our's."

From the beginning of his career as bandit, Villa has taken from the rich alone. He has been forced, on occasion, to take the poor man's horse or kill the poor man's pig. But he has always paid, if not down on the nail at a subsequent time. The pay car carrying monthly wages to the laborers along the railroad sections is never interfered with, though the train that has on board a goodly shipment of bullion is often in more or less danger of capture. Villa is reputed to have agents everywhere—even in the City of Mexico—who keep him posted on bullion shipments. When there were still cattle on these northern hills he often killed what he desired for his own men and gave the remainder of the meat to the poor retainers of the cattle owner.

GRIM DISCIPLINE

It is fairly well understood, too, that it does not pay to be in opposition. Not long ago he rode into a town:

"You may do what you will in certain houses," he said to his men.

Those houses were occupied by men who were no friends of his. At other times he has declared "hands off" on entering a village and his men obeyed on pain of death. He kills with no more compunctions than a pigeon shooter would exhibit. His ideas of rude justice, too, appeal to a people whose traditions trace back to a militant Spain on the one hand and to a militant Indian autocracy on the other. Some time ago he had as an agent, one, Antonio Cabello Siller, a prosperous advocate. Siller was popularly reputed to have made a fortune of 200,000 pesos by his work for Villa. During a period of temporary need Villa called on him:

"My men need uniforms," he wrote. "Buy them for me."

But Siller refused. He came to Chihuahua City and stayed there—in safety as he believed—for months. One day he thought he might venture back to his own village. Villa's agents were on the lookout and although Siller spent the first night in safety, as he was about to mount and leave for the city of refuge the following morning Villa rode in. He greeted Siller with a smile:

"I've come for you, compadre," said he.

Siller begged for his life and his wife dug up a store of gold and silver bullion she had hidden under the earth floor of their old home and even the peons of the village came to ask Villa to let Siller go, for the old man was popular among them. But Villa shook his head. He was inflexible:

"It's no good, friend," said he. "You must go."

THE HOME DEFENSE LEAGUE

So he was hung in sight of the town and all that day his body swung there as a warning. But that night he sent word to the family that they might cut down the body and bury it and even gave his assent to a great funeral. With his grim discipline, and the mingled fear and affection the people feel for him, he has no difficulty at all in manipulating his forces as he wishes.

That is, he had no difficulty until some time ago the Defensa Social was organised. This body might be called the home defense league. It was made up of the small ranchmen and storekeepers who had suffered at Villa's hands and were not afraid to fight back. They knew the ground as well as he does—and in one retreat on banks of the Rio Grande men who have seen it say that he could defeat an army with a hundred men—and were not merely as Villa's own men, but were animated by a sentiment of desperate hate.

But Villa's horses are the best horses to be found in the northern country and the ranchmen's stock is poor and lean nowaday. When pressed too hard Villa's forces melt away like water on hot sand, and the ranchmen begin to chafe at idleness and think of work to be done at home. Lately General Enriquez, who alone had been able to infuse something of his own spirit and vigor into the Defensa Social, was called to the City of Mexico. He is a candidate for governor of Chihuahua, and under the Mexican law he cannot be a candidate and a soldier simultaneously. So that the Defensa Social is losing something of the energy with which it at first attacked.

It is now announced that the federal army will pursue Villa, instead of garrisoning the towns, as has been the first arrangement. But the federal army does not pursue Villa very far. It does not know the ground as he does, it is not well mounted and—

Mexicans say that if Villa were done for there would be no need for so many generals. This is regretable syniciam. But what will you?

Harding Home In Marion, Ohio; His Father And Man Who Taught Him To Set Type

Familiar pictures from Marion, Ohio, the home of Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican Presidential nominee. The large photograph shows decorators at work on the Harding home preparing for the official notification ceremony which was scheduled for the early part of July. Inset on the right shows Dr. G. Tyron Harding, father of Senator Harding. Dr. Harding has promised to drive his "one-horse" shay, which is a familiar sight in the streets of Marion, down Pennsylvania Avenue, in the inaugural parade when "Warren is inaugurated." To the left is shown M. L. Miller, seventy-six years old, and still a compositor on the Marion Star, Senator Harding's paper, who remembers the time when he was teaching Senator Harding to set type. The aged Mr. Miller has been employed on the Star for twenty-six years.

ALIEN MUSICIANS OUSTING BRITISH

London Artists Protest At Acceptance, But Public Is Cold To Pleas

London, June 26.—The long haired Germans and the often unshaven Russians, without whom before the war no British musical entertainment could have hoped for success have settled on London again like a swarm of bees, ousting thousands of Britishers from their jobs.

The English public where the arts are concerned asserts the peculiar national trait of self-effacement and wills itself to believe that no musician of its own flesh and blood can be an artist; that musical genius is always to be found outside these islands. Hence it has taken the return of the foreign musicians as part of the usual scheme of things, with the results that many English girls who seized the opportunity offered by the men being at the war to adopt music as a profession have been thrown out of employment.

"We would not mind if the men were Britishers, but they are not," said one girl violin player. "As matters stand girls are being 'sacked' everywhere to make room for men who are mainly foreigners. We want our chance to make good. No girl now gets the opportunity, not of a good engagement, but of any engagement at all."

Another girl, who had studied music for over five years at a celebrated London college, obtained the post of leader in a certain theater orchestra. She had not held it long when the theater changed hands. Immediately she was informed by the new management that a demobilised soldier who had just returned from Mesopotamia was to have her job. She resigned willingly. But instead of the returned soldier a foreigner was given the job. As she herself expressed it: "I don't mind giving up my job to an Englishman who has seen service, but I do object to being turned down for a foreigner."

Miss Rosabel Watson, one of the best known of English women musical directors, told The Sun and Herald correspondent: "Women orchestral players are undoubtedly going through an extremely difficult time. During the war when the alien element was in abeyance, girl players did much to raise the quality and tone of music played at theaters and restaurants." And she expressed the pious hope that "the girl who plays well will win out in the end."

"He (General Wu Pei-fu) is now convinced that reports of Japanese volunteers having participated in the struggle were true and has reason to believe that 30 of them were killed or wounded, all being dressed as Chinese soldiers. Two, who were recognised as Japanese, were buried by his men."

NEW CABINET NAMED

Peking, August 11.—The mandate promulgating the cabinet has been issued. No alteration has been made in the personnel of the proposed cabinet.

Chin Yung-peng's program, it is learned on good authority, is as follows: (1) The unification of the country: (2) the separation of the civil and military administrations: (3) the disbandment of superfluous troops and retrenchment of the civil administration: (4) financial reform, for which purpose Chin Yung-peng proposes to organise an emergency conference of foreign and Chinese experts with a view to effecting the reform of currency, taxation etc.: (5) education on practical lines.

FRANCE TO TEACH FRENCH FARMERS

Courses In Agriculture And Domestic Science To Be Established

Paris, June 26.—Parliament voted nearly two years ago a law for the establishment in France of an extensive system of agricultural schools and domestic science courses for future farmwives. M. Querille, Under Secretary of State for Agriculture, is just completing the details of a scheme which will be put into effect as soon as the financing is arranged and will be ready to train French farmers in modern methods before winter.

The French scheme will not differ greatly from the American plan adopted in Middle Western and Eastern States, where the crops have shown wonderful increases as the result of extension courses. The greatest difficulty is finding efficient teachers, the war having thinned the ranks of French educators, but M. Querille intends to offer better pay to technical instructors.

"We are already assured that several departments will take care of expenses, and first will inaugurate several small farm schools and dairy courses," says M. Querille. "These will be maintained throughout the winter and spring will give the peasant the opportunity to put his new found education into practical use. I am certain this will offset the growing tendency of French peasants to emigrate. This tendency is especially noticeable in the mountain districts, and here again we will make an effort to study the individual needs of the district, giving pupils training in horticulture and forestry which will have a lasting effect upon French prosperity.

"As for the domestic science schools, the reputation of the French for thriftiness is well known, but we will supplement this instinct with professional knowledge of sewing, home making and decoration and child rearing."

In short, M. Querille intends to make French education practical and not picturesque, and is seeking the co-operation of banks, trades unions and the Government in granting ample funds. While the budget allowance is not decided, the law already provides that a certain percentage of all Pari-mutuel wagers must be devoted to agricultural institutions, and from this alone the income for the present year is estimated at several million francs.

The First Aerial Derby around the world is organised by a special commission under the auspicies of the Aero Club of America and the Aerial League of America. The commission made a tour of the world October 10, 1919 May 11, 1920, dissolving by mutual consent in Paris on the latter date. The work of preparation for the contest is in charge of the acting chairman of the contest committee of the Aero Club of America who was executive Secretary of the commission. Data is being compiled and details worked out.

HOLLANDER WINS CYCLING RACE

(Reuter's Service)

Antwerp, August 8.—The following is the result of the final of the 50-kilometer cycling race in the Olympic Games:

Peeters (Holland) 1
Johnson (England) 2
Halfin (Australia) burst a tyre and retired.

London, August 9.—It appears that the week-end sporting results received from Antwerp do not refer to the Olympic games, but to world championships organised by the Internationals Cyclists' Union. The Olympic games are due to start today.

Hawaiian Duke On Swimming Team Of America

(Reuter's Service)

Antwerp, August 9.—The trials to select the members of the American team to compete in the relay swimming races in the Olympic Games has resulted in the nomination of six entrants whom the final team of four will be chosen on the day of the race. Amongst those selected were Norman Ross, W. Harris, Jr., Perry McGillivary and Duke Kahanamoku.

AMERICAN SHOTS WIN OLYMPIC TEST

Using The Army Weapon They Defeat 13 Other Teams—Easily Take Title

(Kokusai Associated Press)

Beverloo, Belgium, August 1.—American marksmen, using the American army rifle, against thirteen other teams, won the team and individual matches in the Olympic classic free for all contest.

Beverloo, Belgium, July 31.—The United States won three of the seven target events, tied for the first place in another, obtained one second place and one third place. America has thus easily won the title as champion of the world in marksmanship.

America won the team shooting competition in the combined 300 and 609 metre event with a score of 582.

Norway was second, France third, Switzerland fourth, Sweden fifth.

Fifth Game Of Series Today

At five o'clock this afternoon, the Regulars and the Bolsheviki will scrap it out for the fifth game of the series.

The two teams now stand tied, each having won two games, and it is getting to be a very close struggle for the odd game, which will decide the winner.

"Baby" Claire is slated to pitch for the Bolsheviki, and either "Kid" Tinkham or Porterfield for the Regulars.

As soon as this series is finished the men will start real hard work-outs to get into first class shape for the coming series with Tientsin.

There have been several players developed during the Inter-city series, and it is not known for certain who will compose the team to oppose the Northern visitors.

Nearly all of the positions are closely contested, and it is a pretty fight between the boys for each position.

Army Officers Will Make Up Polo Team

New York, July 19.—The United States will be represented in the polo competition at the Olympic games by a team composed of Army officers stationed overseas, it was decided today at a conference between Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the American Olympic committee and William A. Hazard, secretary of the Polo Association.

The team, composed of Colonel Margetts and Captains Harris, Rumbough, Allen and Tate, has been playing in England.

SHANGHAI SEES OLD FRIEND ON OLYMPIC RANGE

Lt. Com. W. A. Lee, U.S.N., Was Prominent Marksman Here Several Years Ago

New York.—The United States rifle team which is to represent that country in the Olympic Games at Antwerp, Belgium, this summer, has arrived in Europe. Lieut.-Gen. R. L. Bullard, commander of the Department of the East, is in charge of the team.

SHOOTING EVENTS

There are 12 shooting events on the rifle program in the Olympic Games, and the United States will be fully represented in each. In past Olympics it was compulsory to use the arms of the country holding the games, but in this meeting the shooters can select their own arms, as long as they comply with the rules. Telescope sights will not be allowed. Neither will sling or a strap. Belgian targets will be used, and the distances will be as near the announced measurement as possible.

In the Olympic events five shooters will be permitted to shoot for each nation in the individual events, and in the team events five men can shoot with two substitutes named. A substitute cannot replace a man after the event has begun.

MEMBER OF CLUB HERE

Individual events will be at 300 and 600 meters. At 300 meters there will be 10 shots standing, 10 shots prone, with 2 sighting shot for each position. At 600 meters there will be 10 shots prone, with 5 sighting shots. The team events will be at 300 and 600 meters. There will be 10 shots standing and 10 shots prone at 300 meters, with 2 sighting shots for each. Ten shots prone will be shot at 600 meters and 5 sighting shots will be allowed. These events will be shot twice.

There will be individual and team events at 300 meters with small arms, with 40 shots standing, 40 shots kneeling or sitting and 40 shots prone in each competition, with 10 sighting shots for each change of position. With the small-bore rifle there will be a 50-meter event, individual and team, of 40 shots standing, with 4 sighting shots.

Lieut. Com. W. A. Lee, one of the American team, will be remembered locally, among old-timers, as a member of the committee of the Shanghai Revolver Club (Navy Branch) when the U. S. S. Helena was stationed here, and one of the best rifle-marksmen who ever visited Shang-

Nerves Biggest Factor In Golf, Opinion Of Ouimet

BY FRANCIS OUIMET

The more golf I play the more convinced I become—all else being equal—that success is largely dependent on the condition of one's nerves. And although it is a common saying that some of the stars of the links are supposed to be players without any nerves at all, so cool are they in competition—a remark that applies so pointedly to Walter Hagen—there is abundant evidence that Hagen and all such stars possess plenty of these fine white fibres.

When Jerry Travers was going at his best pace he was frequently referred to as a man who was a "veritable icicle" when under fire.

So far as outward appearances were concerned, this was true. One might well think that Jerry actually had no nerves. I might go on naming many other topnotchers with the same sort of records to their credit, but these two will suffice, as they so well illustrate the point I am driving at.

As a matter of fact Hagan possesses as many nerves as any one in this whole world. In fact were he lacking in them he would be quite like a plant without water, therefore lacking in life itself. Indeed, he has them in abundance or he could not keep going at the golf pace he has been setting for the past year or so.

Hagen stands today as the best of American golfers all because he has backed up his great skill with remarkable nerve control. His nerves are well-oiled, responding to his least wish when playing. Did he lack this control it would not be possible for him to maintain his pace. In fact were it not for his nervous energy he would not be the champion he is.

This nerve control made it possible for him to go out and not only over-haul Mike Brady but beat him in that sensational final round for the open championship last year. Of course, courage determination and supreme confidence played their part, but these qualities count little if the nerves get beyond control.

Additional evidence was furnished at Pinehurst recently when I studied him carefully and watched his control after a poor shot. This, in the last analysis, is the real test of golf temperament.

He who fusses following a club or throws his clubs, or gives outward sign that he is upset cannot rise to the top rank. But that player who calmly takes the bad breaks without disturbing his control and with the smile is a golfer in a thousand.

Such is Hagen when the unexpected happens. Nothing causes his game to be upset. And right here is food of value for any golfer. If one learns to control his temper in such trying situations he is bound to improve his game, get better results and a tremendously larger share of enjoyment from his round each day.

Yet the best golfers do break. To me the outstanding example of "nerves" was shown by Jerry Travers when playing in England in 1914. Let me say to those who do not know Jerry that he was a bundle of nerves, but had them under magnificent control. That was the reason why he made such a remarkable record for years on the links. And not only did Travers possess control of his nerves but he backed this quality up with a lion-hearted courage—a combination almost unbeatable.

Yet Travers was defeated in England in 1914, and, to quote from the press at that time, it was because he had "a case of nerves."

As I think of it now that just about describes the trouble—the reason for his first poor showing. But the cause was no lack of courage, as one might conclude, rather it was due to Travers getting tired of golf for the time being. He had been overfed with it. The result was the links held no lure and his weary nerves refused to yield to his indomnitable will for the first time.

Which is about the only thing that can wreck the game of such a chap. It is nothing more than the staleness that all athletes experience now and then. There is nothing to the discredit of a golfer to come a cropper by such a route.

Pastor Packs With His Real Punishing Punch

Reverend Joseph N. Barnett of Grand Junction, Colo, is a fighter as well as pastor of St. Matthew's Episcopal church. At a recent athletic meet, a foreigner approached the clergyman and called him a slacker. Reverend Barnett knocked the man off his feet. A general fight resulted.

When the assailant was arrested and fined, Reverend Barnett said he was sorry but he could not let the man's insult go unchallenged. The clergyman served as an army chaplain overseas during the war.

AMERICAN POLO LEADER PAVING WAY IN LONDON

Whitney's Men Have Purchased Famous Ponies For International Match

London, June 26.—America has been forehanded in preparing for the contest for the International Polo cup. Though the games will not be played before next June at Hurlingham, it is learned that representatives of Harry Payne Whitney already have been here and arranged to purchase some of the most famous British thoroughbred ponies.

The British are not to be taken unawares in this respect, as they were last time. They have had a defense committee organised and working for months protecting their own supply of blooded stock, which they contend is without equal for stamina, speed and cleverness at the game.

Brig.-General Vaughn, who commanded the Third Cavalry Division in the first battle of Cambrai, heads the defense committee and is watching both players and pony studs. Major Rattle Barrett will be captain of the team in all probability.

CHALLENGE NOT SENT

While the Polo Association has as yet sent no challenge for the International Polo Cup to England, it has been understood right along that an American team was to make the trip to Hurlingham in 1921 in search of the trophy. When discussion of international polo was renewed after the war it was thought at first that both countries could get satisfactory teams ready in time to have a match contested this summer. The British, however, came to the conclusion that there was not sufficient time left to get a strong cup defense team into shape, and the suggestion was made that the contemplated challenge be put off for another year. To this the American officials were glad to consent, not only because they recognised the fact that the British were not properly prepared, but on account of the lack of practice and the uncertain condition of the leading American polo candidates as well. It was agreed that the delay of a year would be just as helpful to the Americans as to the British cup holders.

MAKE-UP OF TEAM DOUBTFUL

It is the current season of polo that will determine the make-up of the American challenging team, or, at least, the strongest candidates for places on the squad. At present writing it appears to be certain that of the team that last faced the British only Devereux Milburn is sure of being selected. Earl W. Hopping, who played sensational polo all through the season of 1919, seems to be the leading candidate. The other two regulars probably will be chosen from among Louis E. Stoddard, Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.; Malcolm Stevenson, J. Cheever Cowdin, Harry East and Robert E. Strawbridge, but it will all depend on their showing in the open and championship tournaments to be held within the next three months.

At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Polo Association it was decided to issue a challenge for the International Polo Cup, and a sub-committee, made up of H. P. Whitney, Robert E. Strawbridge, Devereux Milburn and Louis E. Stoddard, was appointed to take charge of all preliminary arrangements for the selection and equipment of the American team.

HYER-BEASLEY RING CONTEST 104 YEARS AGO FIRST BOUT FOR SQUARED CIRCLE HONORS

Jem Mace First Heavyweight To Get Record As Champion But Heenan Really Earned Premier Position

BY CHARLES F. MATHISON

The first heavyweight championship bout in America took place 104 years ago, when Jacob Hyer, a resident of New York city, defeated Thomas Beasley in a contest for the America title. Authentic details of the bout are not obtainable, the only information at hand being that the contest took place in 1816 and that Hyer was the winner. It seems also that it was the only battle in which the original champion of the class engaged, and after waiting four years the title holder retired from the ring.

Twenty-one years later Tom Hyer, son of Jacob Hyer, claimed the title, defended it successfully against Country McCloskey and Yankee Sullivan, collected a forfeit from John Morrissey and then was compelled to retire from the ring because of lack of opponents. Hyer was a six footer, weighing 180 pounds in condition, and his battle with McCloskey strung out 101 rounds, London rules, occupying 2 hours and 55 minutes. Hyer defeated Yankee Sullivan in sixteen rounds, lasting 18 minutes and 17 seconds.

HYER RETIRES

Hyer retired from the ring in 1847, and John Morrissey, who later was elected to Congress, claimed title and was successful till John C. Heenan, known as the Benicia Boy, loomed on the pugilistic horizon. Morrissey defeated Heenan the only time they met, at Long Point, Canada, October 20, 1858, Heenan disabling his right hand against a ring post, which he hit instead of Morrisser. Heenan later challenged Morrissey again, but the latter declined the issue and forfeited the title. Heenan did not get a chance to defend his title in America, so in 1861 he went to England and fought Tom Sayers for the world's title. Although Heenan drubbed the Briton so he was unable to respond to the call for the forty-second round, the ring was rushed by Sayers's supporters and the bout called a draw.

FIRST WORLD'S CHAMPION

The official records show that Jem Mace was the first boxer to hold the world's heavyweight title, but John C. Heenan was the first fighter to earn the championship. The fact that the American did not receive credit for his overwhelming victory over Sayers is a blot on the fair play record of the English.

Heenan also received unfair treatment in his bout with Tom King in England three years later, King being unable to come to scratch for the eighteenth round. The referee gave King time to recuperate and ordered the bout resumed. King eventually won as the result of Heenan being drugged by one of his own seconds. The King fight was Heenan's last appearance in the ring.

Joe Coburn, one of the cleverest of the bare knuckle fighters, succeeded to the American championship after the retirement of Heenan, and as Jem Mace was the champion of England at this time (1862) there was talk of a battle for the world's title. They finally were matched, and Coburn went to Ireland, the ring having been pitched in Tipperary. Mace failed to appear and certainly forfeited the world's title to Coburn.

The Arrow Of Gold. By Joseph Conrad. (Fisher Unwin) 6s. net.

Love has not figured much in Conrad's wonderful gallery of male types, and Conrad as a lover is new. For this is a study of love, of woman, of sex approach woven in a setting characteristic of the writer, to whom atmosphere is the appealing mechanism. In this book all is quiet and brooding, electric, aristocratic old-world. The sea captain is an artist. The book opens with this man sitting in a cafe at Marseilles in Carnival time, and a pretty girl in a loup or mask darts out a red tongue at him. Then there is a long introductory. At last she, the woman, love, appears incarnate of the "eternal thing." From this point onwards interest grows, rising to the culminating point of the kiss of abandonment unlike all other books on love, for the rest is "personal."

Men often mock at words, but words with Conrad have the sou of life. We are thrilled. The very oddity of the drama, the vertigo of the types, the fastidiousness of taste, the rococo mystery of it all fascinates in a way difficult to explain, and in Rita fiction has a grand type. Almost we would judge Conrad by this type immensely critical, the lover of illusion. Like love, the kiss is the unreality, the approach is all. And of course that is life. So Conrad can paint a woman as he can understand the sea! Will he ever explain the profoundes of all mysteries: man—the lover of illusion?

SOCIAL

The Case For Liberty. By E. S. P. Haynes. (Grant Richards, Ltd.) 6s. net.

After five years of war in the name of Liberty, a book pleading for the idea might seem superfluous, yet never has such a book so good a case. It is, indeed, the national cry. Today, with our Government by Orders in Council, our bureaucracy, our Trusts, our servile Press, our militarism, our "coupon" electorate, our propaganda direction, our byzantinism, Liberty is a memory, and great will be the fight if we are to win back to it. Here is a reasoned argument of the case, admirably stated, going to the roots. We strongly advise people to read it.

Mr. Haynes justly spots the politician as the cardinal offender. Why is it, he asks, that the politician is never punished, no matter what harm he does to the community, what national disaster he brings about? The answer is the total absence of Ministerial responsibility, and the greater the irresponsibility the stronger the process of centralisation. That is Britain's danger today. Mr. Haynes states the case fairly, unanswerably. He sees that the politicians of our day will have to be "broken," or Parliamentary Democracy will fail.

Taxation In the New State.
By J. A. Hobson. (Methuen and Co., Ltd.) 6s. net.

Mr. Hobson's writings on economics are always distinguished and not to be confused with "our City" expert who writes for the Press. His subject this time is taxation, and he significantly associates it with the "new State." No man desirous of realising what is in store for him should miss this reasoned study of the position and its needs, for there can be no two opinions on the position as Mr. Hobson states it, and not much opening for argument on the remedy, which is conscription of capital, as the phrase goes. Mr. Hobson soundly rejects the proposal of a levy on war wealth only, seeing the difficulties of assessment; he advocates a true levy on capital as the sole means of paying off the debt and so reducing our taxation to endurable proportions. He is scrupulously careful in avoiding a political bias, and confines his inquiry solely to "ability to pay." The alternative is the income-tax. He advocates the immediate creation of a Special Committee on War Profiteering as a start. Here we have the real "fruits" of war. Let every man read and digest.

OLD AND NEW MASTERS

Old And New Masters. By Robert Lynd. Fisher Unwin. 12s. 6d. net.

A rather astonishing volume of criticism, both literary and personal, has been finding its place in the publishers' lists during the past two years. Mr. Lynd's book, the latest in this kind, is certainly not the least. A very catholic survey of letters, wholly discursive, passing at will from Jane Austen to Dostoevsky, and from Keats to Joseph Conrad, it displays throughout a penetrating and original judgment, at times refreshingly iconoclastic, but (with equal refreshment) entirely free from sensationalism for its own sake. To review such a collection, other than by copious extracts, which space forbids, is a manifest impossibility; to call such and such a judgment sound is to state merely the agreement of the reviewer. One can, however, say that no one is likely to find Mr. Lynd's chapters (which are restfully short) other than stimulating. Whether he writes of Jane Austen's dear gossips that they are "the most unoccupied people, I think, who ever lived in literature," or of Watts-Dunton "domesticating his macaw," or of a dozen other matters, he displays very pleasantly a gift for translating appreciation into phrase. The result is a book to keep for dipping into, as one might consult the verdict of a clever friend; indeed, friends of this quality are rare enough to be grappled, if not with hooks of steel, at least within the doors of some accessible book-case.

COMMON SENSE DEFENDED

The philosophical claim to common sense is no new one; rather it is so time-honored and universal that it can be almost discounted, and it seems that the time has come for metaphysicians to leave the term out of their writings. Common sense is claimed by everybody for his own ideas, and one suspects any laboring of the claim.

In "Essays in Common Sense Philosophy" (Harcourt, Brace & Howe), C. H. S. Joad of Balliol college, Oxford, gives us an admirably clear rethinking of contemporary metaphysics, in which his ultimate claim rests on the views that we do actually perceive things as they are, that apparent differences and discontinuities in experience are real and that the Hegelian theory of the state is essentially wrong, inasmuch as the state is only a subordinate institution within the larger whole of human society. The first point is made out on the basis of Meinong's Gegenstandstheorie, which, even if it be accepted, is not obviously the reasoning of common sense. Similarly, the defense of pluralism based on Russell's treatment of relations, comes indeed to the plain man's conclusion, but by a tortuous path.

Two other important essays in this book of clear and hard thinking are those on truth, which is extremely valuable on its destructive side and on universals, where the latest and most literal defense of the platonic doctrine of forms is presented with the most admirable lucidity.

This book should be widely read. It deserves close and careful study as an indication of the best lines of the metaphysical thought of today. The volume is beautifully printed in a somewhat precious style, and although the Greek quotations contain some slips, it reflects great credit on the publishers.

'PHILOSOPHY OF PLAY'

The best book of the late Dr. Luther H. Gulick, once a professor at Springfield college, is called "The Philosophy of Play" (Charles Scribner's Sons), and will be valuable to parents and educators everywhere. Dr. Gulick believes that play 'affords the best and most profitable way of studying humankind itself, both individuals and races." On this theory he has built up an attractive guide to the understanding of children's ways.

Using his own children and those of his friends and acquaintances for examples, he traces the mental development of the young from their birth to adolescence and even into middle life. There is not a hint of superficiality in his treatment, though written in an entertaining manner.

After he has emphasised clearly the power of play in its broadest definition as a determining factor in life, Dr. Gulick declares that "play in itself is neither good nor bad," and describes comprehensively how play must be encouraged, increased and supervised as a means of bettering the conditions of health among the American people.

'UNKNOWN LONDON'

In "Unknown London," by Walter George Bell (John Lane), there is "much concerning those things which everybody knows about, but nobody knows—the things you have known about since childhood and have been content to leave at that, knowing little of what they are or where they are to be found." Mr. Bell deals principally with historical London. He takes us to see London's Roman baths, gives us a look at the Domesday Book (compiled by William the Conqueror), and shows us Smithfield, where so many 16th-century martyrs were burned. The city of London, "the innermost square mile," is richest in historical material, and only twice, once for a trip to the abbey to see the Confessor's bones, and once for a trip to Wapping high street for a breath of the romance that belongs to seafaring life, does Mr. Bell go outside those limits. The book takes history for granted, and tells in a leisurely manner things of interest to those who like to browse about where history has been made.

HUGO STINNES IS IN POLITICS TO GUARD WEALTH

Development Of German Capitalist And Owner Of Many Newspapers

FORTUNE BILLION MARKS

New Deputy Of People's Party Controls Nation's Most Vital Enterprises

BY RAYMOND SWING
(New York Sun-Herald)

Berlin, June 26.—The election of Hugo Stinnes, Germany's wealthiest citizen, to the Reichstag has focussed the nation's attention on a man who hitherto has evaded great publicity and used privacy to amass a fortune which is said to aggregate a billion marks.

Herr Stinnes's name cropped up from time to time before and during the war as a factor in the steel and coal industries. Then lately because he began to purchase newspapers. But only today Germany awakens to the fact that such capitalists as they have seen in the Krupps have been outstripped in ambition and power by a new Deputy of the People's Party, and that in one way or another he has great control or influence over the nation's most vital enterprises.

FROM MINES TO POLITICS

Herr Stinnes's entry into politics smacks of his whole career. He can be characterised as a man who grew strong because he knew how to appraise economic relationships. He began as the owner of coal and iron mines, entered the electric field to supply the mines with economic power, invested in steel mills to make the most out of the ore, and then to protect the shipments he became the largest owner of inland water craft and shipbuilder.

One of his new and seemingly unrelated leaps was into the paper industry, in which last year he gained an important influence, and he then bought a string of newspapers to consume the paper product. And now, having capitalised the value of relationships, he crowned his insight with a recognition of the part politics plays, and so joined the business man's party and has entered the Reichstag.

It is the record of a logical development to the ultimate step Herr Stinnes has not entered politics to add the German State to his multiple enterprises, but because he feels the need of safeguarding the prerogatives of modern German capitalism. Herr Stinnes and his confreres of the People's party are not individualists in the extreme sense.

It is told of Herr Stinnes that he was one of the few who early foresaw Germany's defeat in the war, predicted the revolution and acknowledged the crucial nature of the labor problem. The so-called Arbeitsgemeinschaften, or co-operative organisations of capital and labor, which have been built up since the war, are declared to be the children of Herr Stinnes's genius.

A FRIEND OF LABOR

Herr Stinnes himself is defined by his colleagues as the cordial friend of labor, who recognises their needs and understands their problems in a peculiar degree since as a young man he worked side by side with the miners.

From the social standpoint Herr Stinnes's solution of the labor problem is open to criticism, because it generously grants wage advances without a quibble and then adds the increase to price and unloads it on the consumer. But as a palliative.

Herr Stinnes is forty-nine years old and the son of Matthias Stinnes, who died when Hugo was nineteen, leaving his widow sole heir to an estate valued at 6,000,000 marks.

At eighteen he attended a mining school at Dortmund and later a mining academy at Klausehal, working between times as an inspector and foreman for his father. When his father died, though Hugo had an older brother, his mother petitioned the court to declare Hugo of an age that could legally administer the estate.

She declared in the petition that her son had showed such exceptional managerial talent and had so much experience that he was the most suited to take his father's place. This unique plea was granted and Herr Stinnes was one of the few Germans who attained his majority without having to wait until he was twenty-one years old.

Young Stinnes himself acted as general manager of all his mother's mines with only superintendents under him.

Herr Stinnes was the first to install electric power in a German mine, and after succeeding in this experiment he began to extend the horizon of his activities. He bought steel mills and canal and river shipping. He bought out large coal dealers so he could serve as his own distributor. He finally came into control of all shipping on the Rhine, Weser, Oder and Elbe, and, via inland waterways, reached Hamburg and Bremen, where he invested heavily in ocean shipping companies.

From this his interests spread to shipbuilding, and he bought large holdings in shipyards both at Hamburg and Bremen. Before entering the paper field he purchased the controlling interest in a company owning the Hotel Esplanade in Berlin and Hamburg. Current reports placed the number of newspapers under his control as being sixty, but friends say the number is much smaller. He is proprietor of the Augsburg Muenchener Allgemeine Zeitung and part owner of the Muenchener Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Berlin, which since the days of Bismarck have been the official newspapers of the Imperial Government. He also owns shares in the reactionary Rheinische Westfalische Zeitung and has been negotiating lately to buy out the Ullsteins, Berlin publishers of the Vossische Zeitung, the Morgenpost and other journals.

Herr Stinnes is renowned for his lack of passion and of idiosyncrasies. He is characterised as a friendly, straight ahead human being, with the remarkable gift of coming to the point and making swift decision.

Paintings Of Juno Again In Venice

Paris, June 26.—After 100 years the Veronese painting of Juno pouring out treasures upon the city of Venice is being returned from the Museum of the Beaux Arts in Brussels to the Doge's Palace in the Italian city. The painting is considered a very fine specimen of Veronese art and once ornamented the ceiling of the Doge's Palace.

When the Venetian State was suppressed, its art treasures were scattered and the Juno arrived in Paris where Germany for years prized it as one of the chief attractions of the Louvre. In 1811 the Louvre was overcrowded and the Juno was sent to Brussels. Its restitution has long been requested by the Italians, and the Belgian acquiesence at this period marks the exceptionally strong friendship that is developing between the two nations.

ASK YOURSELF THIS QUESTION

Your Happiness Depends Largely Upon The Answer

Are you feeling as well and looking as young just now as you should do? If not, why not? You are just as old as you feel, and your feelings and looks depend largely upon the condition of your blood.

If the blood is rich and red it feeds the brain, nerves and muscles, keeping them fresh, flexible and vigorous. If the blood is poor, watery, and filled with poisonous acids, the whole system speedily falls into an unhealthy condition, the face becomes thin and haggard, symptoms of age become apparent when you still should be feeling young.

"What is the secret of good blood?" you ask. "How am I to restore health to my blood, and thus to my body, when I am feeling ailing and weary and old before my time?" Tens of thousands of people, not in this country only but throughout the world, will tell you that they have found this secret in Dr. Williams' pink pills, the renowned blood and nerve tonic.

For over thirty years, by their direct and powerful action on the whole system through the blood Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people have been curing (often in the worst and apparently most hopeless cases where ordinary medicines have proved to no avail) anaemia, nervous breakdown, general weakness, indigestion, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, partial paralysis, malaria, and the special ailments of women. They are obtainable from dealers everywhere, also direct from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, at $1.50 the bottle, $8.00 for six bottles, post free.

If you are ill or ailing, or not so well as you would like to be, begin your own cure today. Delay where health is concerned is dangerous.

France Will Honor U. S. Air Pioneers

Paris, July 3.—A French tribute to the American pioneers in aviation will be expressed on July 17 when Ambassador Wallace, Premier Millerand and officials of the aero clubs of France and the United States will unveil a monument at Le Mans to Wilbur Wright.

The monument is the gift of the Comite Wilbur Wright, headed by Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, who aided in the Wright's' experiments at Le Mans twelve years ago when the world's scientists scoffed at the theories of the American inventor. The French Secretary of State for Aviation expects to participate and deliver an address, in which he will trace the influence of the Wrights' successes on French soil as the basis of French progress in aviation which played a very great role in winning the war.

A round of social functions is being scheduled. It is likely that a special train will be run from Paris to Le Mans, familiar to thousands of American doughboys as the last way station on their homeward journey. Arrangements also are being made to have flyers from the American forces on the Rhine circle over the monument during the ceremony.

Easter Clothes

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,
The Distinguished Authority on Household Efficiency.

WHEN I asked my charming young secretary what I should talk about to my readers to-day, she replied: "Easter clothes."

"Yes," I answered, "but you know I'm not a fashion expert, and besides, we are supposed to discuss only household and kitchen matters in this department."

"Well," she replied, "why not kitchen clothes then?"

And so I agreed that at this season of the year, when every woman's thoughts turn clotheswards, we might talk about what is the most efficient or most becoming costume in which to serve meals or chase the dust from the furniture.

I have tried vainly several times to induce those more expert than I to design some special clothes for the housewife. But in some way the subject of a dishwashing apron, for instance, or a cleaning dress does not appeal to these designers quite as much as imagining a "taupe duvetyn afternoon toilette." Yet is it not true that for the one time that a woman wears the afternoon dress, there are ten times when she needs a well-made, well-fitting garment to wear in household work."

After some experiment on my part I have designed a garment which, for Summer wear at least, fills most of the requirements of an attractive and efficient housedress. In type it is a smock, similar to many that may be seen either in good shops or made by the woman herself. It is as long as the usual dress (short length), so that it completely envelops the figure. It is cut all in one piece without a single seam, the sleeves are kimono and the garment slips on over the head. There is a two to three inch belt, loosely adjusted.

From my point of view such a dress fulfills, first, the need of absolute freedom which any housework dress must have. There are no tight armholes, no "pull" even when the arm is raised straight up, as, for instance, in using a dry mop to clean a wall. The whole garment moves, not from the waist, but from its whole length, so that stooping, reaching, or any arm or body motion is perfectly free.

Next, the garment has no puckers, gathers or anything to get bunchy. It is ample without being too full. The rather wide belt fits it somewhat to the figure, but still allows it to be loose.

If a woman prefers collars, she may add any such touch to the neck, but my preference is for a V shape or square Dutch neck with no lapel or collar hanging behind.

The materials which such a dress looks best in are unfinished and somewhat heavy materials of the type called imitation linen. Such a weave is much coarser than what used to be known as ramie linen. Since the material is unfinished, it never needs starch and practically no ironing.

In Summer time it is not necessary to wear any under petticoats, and this again is an advantage, because the dress still looks well and is presentable even for doing a morning shopping. I wish I had the space to show an illustration of this dress, but I am sure that from my description any reader will get a clear idea of this very simple but efficient garment.

The next best housework dress is the familiar bungalow apron, although my objection to it is that it is so often too loose, badly fitting and too wrappery for a neat appearance. However, if carefully cut, stitched and made of good materials it is attractive and allows much freedom of movement.

When I tackle the subject of aprons I wish that I had a fashion expert and an illustrator at my elbow. Once, some years ago, I saw a double spread page of aprons designed for Red Cross and canteen workers. Some of these were almost like dresses, others were modifications of the typical nurse's apron, and still others were so novel that I longed to see them made and sold by the millions to housewives everywhere. However, there were no patterns accompanying this page and I regret that I can only sketch some of the good points.

"Concentrate upon the spot where the skin's smooth surface shows the slightest tracery."
Photograph Posed by MISS GRACE DARLING at CAMPBELL STUDIO.

One I recall was made of ordinary kitchen toweling, about 24 inches wide, such as can be purchased for about 25 cents a yard. This apron was placed over the head through a single opening and hung in a straight line from neck to dress hem. In the back a cross strip with buttons fastened the back portion to the front with the aid of a strip of white elastic. The whole apron was bound with a two-inch colored braid such as can be bought at the notion counter of many department stores.

A clever friend of mine has designed a dress apron which completely covers any good dress that one might want to wear as she prepared a meal. This is made of butchers' linen with carefully matched seams cut on the bias which give the apron its excellent lines. Such an apron is most useful because there are frequently times when the housewife wishes to be completely dressed and at the same time be able to serve a meal without soiling her gown.

I need hardly say that there has been a great improvement in the kind and quality of clothing worn while performing housework duties. I think that perhaps much of the stigma which has always attached to housework has been due to the fact that housework and a dirty, untidy appearance were always associated. In so many women's minds the thought has been that we must look dirty and unattractive in order to clean a room or cook.

This may have been true when we used the old-fashioned soft coal or wood or the antiquated corn broom and rag mop. But to-day with fuels like gas and electricity which create so little soot or dirt and with modern equipment like the vacuum cleaner, etc., there is no need for a woman to appear "a sight" just because she is doing housework in the home.

I have questioned many maids or others who have done housework and they universally say that one of the reasons why they prefer to work in shop or factory is because they can appear more dressed up. Now one of the inalienable rights of women is not only life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, but also the right to appear attractive. Work must be so subordinated or so managed that the worker doing it will not become physically disfigured or unsightly.

My plea this morning is for all housekeepers to take more interest in the design and quality of the clothes we wear while at our house duties. Many a woman who is clever at cutting and sewing can surely design attractive housework clothes. Her children may always recall her in later life, not in her special occasion dress, but the way she looked every day when they saw her around the house. Also for her own self respect the housekeeper should take pains with her appearance while at work. It is positively true that we work more efficiently in well-fitting, practical work clothes than in sloppy left-overs or down at the heels dance slippers.

Clothes for Easter, yes. But let us include in our Spring trousseau two or more attractive, well designed costumes for housework.

Massage Secrets

By Lina Cavalieri,
The Most Famous Living Beauty.

EVEN after you have just completed an all over body bath, a cold cream massage is always needful for the face. I give you here one of my favorite receipes: Rose water, 500 grams; oil of sweet almonds, 500 grams; white beeswax, 20 grams; spermaceti, 20 grams; oil of rose, 10 drops.

All these articles must be absolutely pure. If you do not have a reliable druggist, send them to a chemist to be analyzed. It is expensive to do this, I know, but it never pays to economize in the things that are to be used for the complexion. Let me tell you how to prepare the cold cream at home.

Place the beeswax and the spermaceti in a double boiler and heat the mixture gently and slowly. Do not allow to boil for this will interfere with the proper blending of the materials.

With a long handled wooden spoon stir in slowly the oil of sweet almonds. To perfect saponification or emulsifying, the rose water should be added little by little and before cooling work in two drams of powdered borax. When this is completed, pour the whole into a stone jar or china vessel, and after it has cooled, not before, add the oil of rose to perfume it.

This cream will last you for many months and you can also have the satisfaction of knowing it is absolutely pure.

The way I massage my face is to dress in a loose, comfy robe and sit before the mirror of my dressing table. This, I have found, is far better than the lazy way of massaging it while in a reclining position.

Also, I must have a good light for massage. For this reason I insist upon upon a strong light over my shoulder, my left shoulder, preferably. This falls directly upon the mirror and shows me any line that I might have acquired since the morning before.

Sitting there, facing the mirror, I give my face a most searching inspection. Mercilessly I scrutinize every portion of the skin. Whenever there is the slightest tracery upon the smooth surface, it is upon that spot I concentrate. For at least ten minutes I massage my face carefully, always keeping in mind the purpose of the massage.

That is, that wrinkles are caused by defective circulation in one spot and that the way to remove them is to increase the circulation in that spot. Sending a fresh supply of blood to the sunken region will tend to fill out and plumpen it.

Therefore I concentrate on the region from the corners of the lips to the nostrils, that region where the ugly diagonal lines come and the unlovely hint of ill temper, illness or old age. I also rub gently but firmly on the space between the eyebrows where the lines of worry form, and on the area about the outer corner of the eyes, an area easily corrugated by too violent laughter. All these and the remainder of the face I massage by quick, light touches and pats with the cushiony ends of the fingers.

Always with the rotary motion. A lengthwise motion causes the muscles to sag and pulls the skin loose from the muscles. This is very bad. After the rotary movement I go over the face with quick, light but stinging slaps. Finally with a square of clean, soft linen I remove any surplus of the grease that has not been absorbed by the pores.

For the skin that becomes overheated and looks feverish after the massage, this cooling, soothing lotion may be used: Extract of violet, 350 grams; extract of rose, 35 grams; tincture of orris, 30 grams.

Dashed upon the face after a thorough massage treatment, it is deliciously cooling and refreshing. If you do not care for the liquid face bath, fluffing daintily over the face a powder puff dipped in rice powder is sufficient.

To the window I go, mirror in hand, for a further inspection before applying the rice powder. I see, perhaps, traces of acne, or what some of you call "blackhead," on the side of my nose. This must be removed at once. How? Not by pressing it out. Oh, no. That leaves an ugly hole in the skin that leads to the condition known as enlarged pores.

Hunt up a match or a wooden toothpick. Then apply a tiny bit of the following: Rosewater, one-half wineglass; peroxide of hydrogen, one-half wineglass. Shake the mixture well. Dip the unblackened end of the match into the liquid and press the dampened end upon the blackhead. This does not remove it, but it cleanses the color to white.

Sometimes I prefer to use this, which I think is milder: Rosewater, two-thirds wineglass; ammonia, one-third wineglass. Shake well together in a tumbler. Dip the end of the toothpick or match in it and use as other preparation. Like the other this cleanses without removing the acne. That requires more careful treatment and involves the application of a healing ointment or salve.

FRANCE PLEADS FOR COAL, WITH WORKS CLOSING

Schneider, Head Of Creusot Works, Says Other Nations Should Aid

IMPORT BALANCE IS CUT

Business Improves, Strikes Become Fewer And Bolshevists Lose Ground

Paris, July 3.—"Other nations can no more refuse coal to France than they could refuse a drink to a wounded man. The lack of coal affects all industries gravely, but particularly metallurgy, which is the basis of future national development," says Eugene Schneider, head of the Creusot works, who is one of the most confident believers in France coming back faster than financiers and business men of the United States appreciate.

As proof that the French are working hard he has prepared statistics covering the French effort since the armistice, all of which, he says, point to their ability to work out their own salvation. But as France appreciates her destiny as one of the pillars of universal peace she requires allied solidarity without the profit of any particular nation to effect an early and complete rehabilitation of world affairs.

"France does not doubt American friendship. The aid America gave during the war, the blood of her children poured out on French soil, gives us confidence in the fidelity and loyalty of the Americans, persuading us that either with or without a treaty, if a crisis is again to be faced, the American people will hear the call of their dead," he says.

POLITICS CAUSES NO WORRY

So far as the French political situation is concerned M. Schneider does not see grounds for pessimism.

"One fact is remarkable. As soon as any great national interest is at stake a compact majority is instantly formed, all vibrating with a sense of public welfare. This is apparent in the most urgent task faced by our legislators, that of financial restoration, and we have not been found wanting.

"One of the first acts of the new Parliament was to bring receipts to the level of expenses equalising the normal budget For this we have instituted 8,000,000,000 francs in new taxes Sitting continuously for many weeks the Senate and Chamber of Deputies studied the financial problems of formidable taxes, and France will pay almost five times the taxes of 1914. Has any nation done more?"

M. Schneider points out also that internal loans issued since the war have found prompt public support, the last bringing in 19,000,000,000 francs despite the destruction of large areas of France during the war, while even the Government is faced with the necessity of paying pensions and reconstruction charges which really are Germany's burden, and has not hesitated to go the limit in prescribing new levies. He adds:

"So far as industry is concerned, assure Americans that we have not employed our time badly. A new spirit is spreading among French industrials. Formerly they were reproached with not seeing far enough and being satisfied with moderate returns, but there was in this timidity perhaps an instinctive wisdom tending for gradual increases rather than progress by leaps and bounds.

"Today all the forces of national prosperity are giving their full efforts. Industry has acquired the idea of great figures, great proportions and dimensions. We lack man power, but are attracting the finest types.

"Moreover, French industry has gained the public confidence and the banks have learned to support it."

WORK IN WAR SWEPT AREAS

Even in the devastated regions the factories are working well, according to M. Schneider. In the textile works of the north 78 percent of normal already has been attained, while in the metal industries one-fourth of the pre-war effectives are busy despite the shortage of coal.

Similar progress is shown in the agricultural regions. Of 400,000 acres of land ruined by constant warfare 80 percent are already under cultivation and the remainder will be sown in the fall and early winter, thereby putting the French food supply on a certain basis before next year.

Again stressing the necessity that coal be not withheld from France, M. Schneider said:

"While German factories are working at 65 percent of normal the French are compelled to limit themselves to 25. When it is considered that the cause of the coal shortage is found in the destruction of French coal mines by German orders and the failure of Germany to abide by the coal provisions of the Treaty of Versailles the situation must be considered a miscarriage of justice and a crying abuse that must not be prolonged."

Society Girl Enters Business Field

KATHERINE FORCE

Miss Katherine Force, of New York, sister of Mrs. William K. Dick, former wife of John Jacob Astor, who died in the Titanic disaster, has entered the business field as a real estate broker. Miss Force started in business last January and specialised in the sale of apartment houses. Business is good, she said, and is much more interesting than sitting in the cool gardens of her beautiful Long Island home.

BEST LOST, EDISON SAYS

'Democracy Is Inefficient,' His Comment On Hoover's Defeat

New York, June 20.—"Democracy is inefficient. You can't get the best man," said Thomas A. Edison at the Edison Field Day games at Newark yesterday. He was speaking of the recent Republican nomination. "America had an unusual opportunity to put a man of enormous executive ability, one who has an unusual knowledge of foreign affairs. As an engineer, he was trained to depend upon facts in forming judgments. He is a man who has real common sense."

"The time has arrived for some understanding among the nations which won the war," he continued, speaking of the League of Nations. "A League of Nations document with proper safeguards to protect America's interest would be the proper thing. You know you must learn to creep before you walk. No matter how small the effort may appear to be, the League seems to be able to creep.

"The Administration did not take us into the World War, but the American people insisted on entering the war when conditions became intolerable. We would do the same thing again, League of Nations or no League of Nations."

Asked about women in politics, Mr. Edison said their influence would probably attract a better type of men for office. He doubted, however, that there would ever be a woman President.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying power, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them wilfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better."
JOHN J. LEPPA, M. D.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

"For several years I recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies."
VICTOR H. COFFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."
A. F. PERLES, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm."
EDWARD FARRIER, M. D.,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children, in fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Hongkong Market

Messrs. Moxon and Taylor write as follows in their report dated August 6:

Money is distinctly easier and lenders have reduced their ideas about 3 percent since last week, but owing to the higher rates of exchange ruling the full effect has not been felt so far although business generally shows signs of increasing in volume.

Practically no business has been done with London since our last report and the market there, in the stocks in which Hongkong is interested, has further fallen away. Hongkong Banks being quoted down at £109 ex dividend, Indo Chinas at £41 and Shell Transports at £6.7.6 ex rights and dividend.

Shanghai continues quiet due partly to the absence of a great many brokers from that port. There are, however, buyers of Shanghai Docks at Tls. 129½ ex dividend for September.

We give below a few alterations in rates since last week.

Hongkong Banks:—Have sellers at $615 cum dividend with a few buyers of small lots at $600.

Docks:—Have firmed up to $152 buyers with $157 done for September.

Unions:—Have sellers at $175 with buyers at $170. It is noteworthy of mention that the rate for Unions, when exchange was 4/1 on May 13 last was $195 buyers for cash.

China Sugars:—Owing to a large quantity of cash shares being taken off the market have advanced to a buying rate of $236½.

Wharves:—Have buyers at $84½ and Cements at $7.20.

Exchange.—The demand selling rate on London is 4/2¼ and the T.T. selling rate on Shanghai is 71⅜.

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand's exchange circular for week ending Wednesday, August 11, states:

Exchange:—With fluctuations the London price of silver has risen 2⅝d. during the week to 59⅝ "spot," the forward price is 59⅝d. It is reported that the Indian Bazaars and China have bought. The London-New York cross rate dropped to 3.58 but appears to be in process of recovery and is quoted 3.63¾. A good demand on account of Imports came out on our first rise to 3/10d., but there have been sales of T.T. on London by our native Gold Dealers and occasional lines of Export paper in cover. At the close the market is steady with very little business passing on either side of the book. It is doubtful whether any great amount of silver is being taken off the home silver markets and probably that stocks are again accumulating.

Local stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 33,200,000. Unchanged.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $21,600,000 an increase of $600,000.

Estimated total value in Taels 48,950,000.

DOUG AND MARY— TWO HAPPY KIDS

Not Worrying About Back-Fence Gossip—Views On Married Life

New York, June 30.—Mr. and Mrs. Mary Pickford Fairbanks have all the appearances of a happily wedded pair, and in their dispositions there is nothing of their previous unsuccessful marital affairs noticeable. They are mutually agreed that married life is an art, and that Mary was meant for Doug in the first place, just as Doug was meant for Mary.

And so, these reigning rulers of the movie world are going about their business—and their honeymoon—in a manner that shows they are little, if any, worried that their divorces and marriage are being talked over "every backyard fence in the country.

In New York a few days ago Doug and Mary, honeymooning with a mixture of business connected with their movie company affairs, smiled their way through admiring crowds, with Little Mary every now and then shivering with delight at the reception accorded her and the "gallivantin" hubbie.

Hand in hand, not unlike the schoolboy and girl sweethearts we all know, they strolled down Broadway for a minute or so, and say, as Freckles might have said: "Ain't it grand?" And Doug, with that crescent moon smile, would answer, "'Tis so—'tis so."

Doug was asked to say something about his idea of married life. "Well," Sennett has just produced a picture entitled 'Married Life—Not a War Picture.' Pretty good, eh, what? I agree with Sennett."

Mary admits she is in love with Doug. When he wasn't near, she said:

"He is a wonderful man. One of the many reasons why I love him is that he never will grow up. He is a man through and through, but, after all, he is just like a boy. If the bluebird of happiness ever was blue for me, now is the time. We are deeply in love and nothing else matters."

Mamma Pickford interrupted:—

"Doug is as tender as a woman and as brave as a lion. I never have said much about the newlyweds for publication, but you can state that I, too, am as happy as can be in the children's happiness. I guess it is a reflection that a mother catches when her little girl has found true joy and real love."

Mary summoned "Edmund," the major domo of the Fairbanks household, and asked for his opinion of Doug Edmund said:—

"He is a ver' fine man, this Meester Doug. One day he bring in the duke and duchess of Sutherland. The ver' nex' day he come with Bull Montana and his cowboy, Charlie Miller, and this fightair, Spike Robinson. The ver' nex' day he come with Mr. McAdoo on one side and Battling Burke on 'ze othaire. But we cook for one and cook for all, and the food ees the same, even if Meester Doug's friends are, ah, so ver' different.'

Edmund beamed on Mary, who explained:—

"We have 14 servants. Ordinary servants would be leaving every 10 minutes, for Doug tracks mud into the drawing room, and usually has several of his 25 dogs, including some fierce Alaskan malamutes at his heels. He also insists on anyone who wishes to do so putting his feet on the furniture."

Adopt 'Red' Role To Rob Mayor's Home

Berlin, June 26.—Rowdies marched into Paaren, a village just outside Berlin, Sunday night, and announced themselves to the Mayor as the advance guard of a Red army, at the same time demanding a list of the residents of the place where soldiers might be billeted.

Music by Whitsuntide revellers in a nearby hamlet sounded much like a military band and the Mayor, believing that the Communist troops were coming, opened his door. Immediately the rowdies began beating him. Afterward he and his wife were locked in their cellar, while the men began to rob the house. The woman, however, escaped through a cellar window and aroused the village.

As the robbers drove away with their booty shots were exchanged between them and villagers. The gang was trailed into a forest and some of the stolen goods, including 50,000 marks of the village funds, were recovered. Two arrests were made.

"The Influence Of Foreign Education In Chinese Homes"

FOLLOWS what is in many respects the best letter we have received in this series. It really requires no introduction because it is a complete editorial in itself. It is from the pen of a brilliant and successful foreign educated Chinese. Before introducing it, however, we should like to express our disappointment at the failure of our foreign readers to respond to the appeals which these young foreign-educated Chinese men and women have made to them for helpful suggestions. Perhaps this letter will stir them up:

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

"Dear Sir: Having perused with intense interest a number of the letters written by well-meaning correspondents as a result of the controversy created by the letter of Miss T. L. Kwei published in your issue of the 30th ult., advancing the charge supported by her own by which she means the ways in which Western ideas are translated into practice by Chinese, has greatly injured the Chinese home, I venture to make one or two humble suggestions in the nature of 'cure-all' remedies for this domestic menace which has no doubt been a source of sorrow and disappointment to many earnest souls trying to qualify themselves as ideal home-makers.

"Miss Kwei has been sufficiently outspoken in her condemnation of the wrongful Westernisation on the part of many, many students and returned students while being reticent about the shortcomings of her own sex—an omission which has been happily corrected by the pointed observations in the letter of Cheng Chien published in your issue of the 5th inst. where the picture of wrongful Westernisation on the part of girl students is faithfully painted.

"Inasmuch as the controversy centers in the abuse of foreign influence rather than in the influence itself as an object of attack, and inasmuch as the parties to whom the censure is addressed have failed to produce convincing evidence that the charges have been underserved, the conclusion may be safely reached that there has been a great deal of disastrous Westernisation going on.

"Enough instances have been cited for the purpose of illustrating how society has been scandalised and homes rendered unhappy by the abuse of foreign influence as a result of indiscriminate imitation of foreign ways and manners. But if the outcome of the controversy is to be worthy of the large amount of valuable space which it has already occupied in THE CHINA PRESS, it ought to accomplish one of two things or both:

(a) It ought to act as a deterrent against further demoralising Westernisation.

(b) It ought to create a healthy public opinion in order so to incorporate foreign influence in our national life as to make of it a source of unmixed blessings.

"In calling my suggestions "all cure" remedies, I am afraid that life as to make of it a source readers skeptical. The issue before us is one of social and domestic reforms, and demands strenuous moral effort. Just as the secret of the success of a man of sterling character often may be traced to concentrated efforts applied, at the early stage of his moral life, to the cultivation of one single virtue from which a myriad of good thoughts and deeds have sprung forth, so all the unhealthy symptoms caused by the indiscreet adoption of Western ideas in Chinese homes and society could be made to die a natural death if all of our religious and educational leaders, and all persons whose word carries weight in domestic and social circles, nay, all who believe that the right mental attitude is the basic factor of all reforms, will put their minds and hands together to help our young men and young women, especially those who have had the privilege of receiving a foreign education, to unlock the latent powers with which all ills can be cured and which can only unfold themselves in conjunction with the vigorous development of the sixth sense—The Sense of Proportion.

Once the ideals of true citizenship have penetrated the minds and hearts of our young people, they will be so fired with the zeal of genuine patriotism that all allurements to vanity will become meaningless to them. When the cry of "Save China!" is cherished as a thought nearest and dearest to the heart, all efforts will be directed to the all-round culture of Chinese citizens, the educated will vie with one another to elevate the mental standard of the uneducated, moral and practical considerations will prevail in the choice of life companions, and Western languages and foreign-made goods will only be used in so far as they facilitate our individual and collective endeavors to reconstruct our country along democratic lines.

Enclosing my card, Yours truly.

A Believer in the 6th Sense.

The Vision Perfect

BY ANGELA MORGAN

When life is new, the journey just begun,
'Tis love that we would claim,
Or honor, wealth and fame.
Life lures us with these baubles, one by one,
Even as we, with promise of red toys,
Tempt toddling girls and boys.
So beckons Life along the irksome way
Toward the revealing day.

Oh, Life is very wise!
Softly, sometimes, though other times with pain
She draws from us the trifles we would gain;
Gathers her trinkets from our gloating eyes.
Then, on a hilltop. . . . See!
Lo, the Perfected Plan I had for thee.
Ever I kept it hidden till thy sight
Was strong to bear the light."

And we who dreamed of honor, fame and gold,
Seeing how vast the pattern is, and strange;
Spreading in splendid cycles, range on range,
Until the very heart of God is told,
Answer the angel calling us by name.
Asking: "What blessing now, O child of earth?
What shall the guerdon be, of greatest worth?"
"A Life, this, and this only, do I ask:
That I be strong and equal to the Task!"

In Praise Of Masefield

Praising Mr. John Masefield's new book of Poems, "Enslaved," the Morning Post says:

"Mr. Masefield now ranks as one of the master-poets, whether the power and beauty of his work are considered or his influence on his contemporaries be made the criterion. Let us be grateful for a poet, incapable of writing a line without some touch of incidental power or splendour, who loves the open spaces of sea and earth and sky more than the 'sweet security' of noble streets in even the noblest city."

LINES FROM LETTERS

Dear Wood B. Ryter.

Thank you for letter and suggestions for the Maskee Colyum. Though you are hidden from sight under the veil of anonymity, I am pretty certain you are one of the best. And I am not saying this because you prefer to give a pat on the back instead of a kick in the neck. In these hot days a smile is much more refreshing than a frown, and a happy thought shared, cools many of the rancours of a weary world.

I have been reading a book called "Cats," not by Louis Wain and the author's outlook on women tells a tale of love unrequited and the birth of unreasonable bitterness. The book I suppose, is meant to be funny, and here and there humor does peep out. I like those Louis Wain Cats, but "Cats" not by Louis Wain are as troublesome as mosquitoes. Listen to an extract or two:

Women the fair sex?
No: the un-fair sex.

Germany's Indemnity Payment And America's Economic Problem

BY DR. LOUIS LEVINE

"Europe is eager to begin a normal and healthy life again. The people of most European countries are ready for productive labor. Given a chance, this spirit would revivify the continent in a short time. But at present the spirit of industry is dampened by the uncertainties and ambiguities of a peace treaty which must be intelligently and constructively executed before it can bring peace. The most important step in the re-establishment of a normal Europe is the industrial rehabilitation of Germany, and the key to that is in the hands of the people of the United States. Upon American policy hinges the welfare of Europe and the return of normal economic relations throughout the world."

This summary formed itself in my mind out of the mass of detailed observations and general ideas on the European and international situation with which John Foster Dulles overwhelmed me the other day. Mr. Dulles has had a hand in hammering out the clauses of the Peace Treaty. He was attached to the American Peace Commission as legal adviser on the reparation clauses of the Treaty with Germany. As economic and financial adviser he helped in the preparation of the financial clauses of the treaties with Austria and Bulgaria. As the chief American member of the Reparation Commission when it was first provisionally organised, and as member of the Supreme Economic Council, Mr. Dulles has observed the practical effects of the Treaty of Versailles. He has just returned from another trip to Europe and feels more strongly than ever that conditions would rapidly improve if we only assumed our part in securing an effective execution of the Peace Treaty and a solution of the related interallied problems.

A REVOLUTIONARY PASSPORT

"My trip took me through Germany, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia," said Mr. Dulles. "I found living conditions low, particularly in the first two countries, but I also saw signs of revival everywhere. In Germany, healthy impulses are reasserting themselves. The people are awake to realities. The dominant attitude is one of moderation in politics as well as in economics. The extremists on either side are in the minority. That was proved during the Kapp revolution and during the Red revolt in the Ruhr district.

Mr. Dulles displayed a pass which was issued to him by the revolutionary authorities of the Ruhr district. It was a simple document, a few lines typewritten on ordinary paper without any letterhead and signed by one of the leaders. It allowed the bearer to go about everywhere unmolested. Mr. Dulles used it to advantage to study the situation during those troublous days.

"It was an extremely interesting experience," explained Mr. Dulles. "It revealed to me the temper of the German people. Even the revolutionary communists urged the miners to go on with their work and continue to supply France with coal stipulated for by the treaty. On the other hand, the people of the district remained calm and the uprising died down for lack of support. It was not the Reichswehr troops that put down the rebellion. It was the passive resistance of the people who cut off supplies of food from the Reds. It was as during the Kapp revolution in Berlin when the people refused to have anything to do with the Baltic troops or the Kapp government.

WHAT GERMANS EXPECT

"How do you explain the results of the recent elections?" I asked. "Do not they seem to indicate a weakening of the moderate groups and a drift towards the more extreme right as well as to the left?"

"That is so," replied Mr. Dulles. "But it is a temporary shift which is largely due to the failure of the Ebert Government to perform the elementary functions of government. The German people want a government which will secure for them more bread, opportunity to work, normal conditions in general. At present there still is considerable physical privation. People are on reduced rations. Only extreme ingenuity keeps the people more or less decently clad. The Germans, for instance, will wear their stockings as long as possible and then unravel the threads and use them over again. Large numbers of workers are still out of work. The factories are running only about 30 percent of normal and labor is doing only about 50 percent of its pre-war work. This is what has destroyed faith in the late coalition government. The Allies made a serious blunder in failing to lend it greater support, and missed a golden opportunity. The Ebert Government represented the moderate sentiment of the country; it was sincerely committed to the fulfilment of the treaty and was desirous of maintaining law and order. It lost prestige because it failed to improve conditions for the people and it failed because it was not supported by the Allies."

"What can be done to accelerate the return to normal life in Germany?"

"The most important thing," replied Mr. Dulles, "is to fix definitely the ultimate amount of the indemnity which Germany must pay. The present uncertainty is the greatest unsettling factor in the European situation. It disorganises industry, weakens initiative, kills the incentive to work. It encourages slackness in governmental policies, especially in taxation. The Germans fear that large tax returns would merely encourage the Allies to increase the amount of the indemnity. It is considered almost a patriotic service not to do any more than one has to. Strong and influential men refuse to enter the government because they will not assume responsibilty until the amount of the indemnity is definitely known.

"Do not let any one misunderstand this. I am not accusing the German people of evasion. On the contrary, I believe that Germany so far has showed good faith and a sincere desire to comply with those provisions of the Treaty of Peace which are definite. The early resentment against the treaty, especially against the reparation clauses, was based on misapprehension as to the real intent of the treaty. The Reparation Commission under the treaty was given very elastic powers and it was legitimate to hope and to ask that these powers be exercised in a reasonable way. We all admit that this is necessary. It is the only way in which a workable treaty could be made, and the commission is using its powers accordingly. That is all the German people ask for. They do not deny the justice of reparation in general. I have talked to many leading bankers and industrialists throughout Germany and I have found no one who is opposed to the principle of reparations, especially for the damage done in the devastated regions. All recognise it as an obligation which must be met honestly.

KINDS OF REPARATION

"It is but fair to say that on the whole the Germans have been carrying out the reparation clauses of the treaty in good faith. As you will remember, the treaty recognises three kinds of reparation. First, the restitution of objects which were stolen and which can be identified, such as objects of art, furniture, machinery. A special German commission is in charge of this work. It supplied the Inter-Allied Commission with an index card of all restorable things and with identification cards, and members of both commissions have canvassed the country thoroughly and have succeeded in restoring a large part, practically two-thirds of what had been carried away.

"Then there is reparation in kind for property which was destroyed or which was carried off and can no longer be identified. This covers reconstruction materials for houses and public buildings, cattle and other live stock, coal, and so on. About 250,000 animals have been delivered. Coal has been furnished by Germany to France and Belgium which figures out at about 1,000,000 tons per month since the treaty has been in force. There has been much hard feeling about the delivery of coal. But the trouble is that there is not enough coal to go around. Many mines have been destroyed and productivity has fallen. All Europe is suffering from a lack of fuel. The Reparation Commission has arranged to distribute the coal so as to keep the industries of Germany, France and Belgium about on a par.

"Now, as regards these two kinds of reparation the Germans know exactly what is expected of them and what they have to do. But the third kind, namely, financial reparation, to make good in money the losses sustained by civilians in the war, was not definitely fixed in the Peace Treaty. We all know why. The American members of the Peace Conference were in favor of a fixed sum, but it was impossible to get this under conditions as they were in Paris at the time. If we had insisted on a reasonable fixed sum, it would have meant a break with the Allies or a treaty which the Allies could not have gotten their people to ratify. On the other hand we could not agree to such high sums as some of the Allies talked about because that was beyond the German capacity to pay. We took the middle ground and agreed to let the Reparation Commission fix the amount of indemnity in the future. We hoped that in time the passions of war would cool down and that a more thorough study of the financial situation would permit a sum to be fixed to the satisfaction of all concerned. This is now the main task before the Allies and the chief concern of the Germans. Until this is settled the situation in Germany and in Europe will remain economically unstable and politically dangerous."

"Is it easier to fix the total indemnity now than it was at the Paris conference?" I asked.

"Yes," came Mr. Dulles's answer. "We see the situation much better today and we realise more clearly what is really at stake. If I wished to be blunt, I might say that the sum could be almost any amount which the Allies and America wished it to be. Of course, I am not referring to the five billion dollars which Germany must pay before May 1, 1921, and on account of which her reparations in kind are credited. Of that amount Germany has probably already paid some $3,500,000,000, and the balance will be paid in due time. I am speaking of the more definite sums necessary to indemnity civilians who sustained war losses. This is a large item, and one which cannot be put off very long. Each nation must compensate its own citizens as soon as possible regardless of the arrangements which the Reparation Commission may make. France has passed a law to this effect and has begun disbursing enormous sums of money from her treasury to meet this obligation. But just where should the indemnity by Germany be fixed? We may fix it almost as high as we please. But the higher the sum, the more will it depend upon us whether Germany will be able to pay or not.

INDEMNITY MUST BE FIXED

"This may sound paradoxical, but it is a simple truth. The German people can pay any indemnity which is placed upon them only by rendering services. The German people have little else to give but their skill and their labor. The question is—are we willing to take it—and to what extent? We will be asked to furnish facilities to the German people to render service. There is but one way to do it. The German workers must be supplied with raw materials so that they may work them up into finished products and then export them to the Allied countries. For instance, if we exported to Germany three hundred million dollars' worth of raw cotton and wool, the German factories might turn this into a billion dollars' worth of textile goods. A portion of this product would remain in Germany for domestic consumption, but with frugality of living there might be an excess of, say, six hundred million which the German people could use, one-half to pay for their cotton, one-half in part payment of the indemnity. The same way with machinery and copper goods and drugs and toys and other commodities which Germany can produce and export in large quantities.

"See how that complicates the situation. We in America must consider it seriously, for our commercial policy is perhaps the most important factor in the situation. The United States has enough people, a high enough standard of living and enough money to determine the bids in the international market. Germany can expect to export only a part of her products to France, England and other European countries. She must send a very large or major part of them to our shores. Well, are we ready to receive them? Are we willing to revise our tariff accordingly? Considering textiles alone, would we care to have German factories supply us with cotton goods and cloth and shut down our own factories. But that is exactly what is implied in any policy which contemplates the imposition of a large indemnity on Germany, which must be paid in services and heavy exports.

OUR TARIFF POLICY DECISIVE

"I can put the situation in a few words. Germany can pay a large indemnity, if the Allies will agree to take German goods. Give the German people raw materials and they will produce plenty because their industrial plant is in good condition. Assume that the German people are willing to maintain for the next few years the low standards to which they became accustomed during the war. This means that they would produce much and consume little, and have a big balance for export with which to pay their indemnity. But the fundamental condition is that the world consume more German-made goods."

"That leads us back to where we were in 1914,'" I remarked.

"There is the danger," continued Mr. Dulles. "If we fix the German indemnity very high, we shall be forced to turn Germany into the greatest producing and exporting machine the world has ever seen. All civilsed countries of the world would become dependent in a large measure upon German industry. It is not a desirable condition to look forward to. We must all realise therefore that it is in the interests of the Allies and of the entire world to fix the indemnity at a reasonable amount.

"We cannot ignore, however, the effects of such a decision upon our Allies. The French feel that they have come out of the war diminished in population, devastated and financially embrassed. They have hoped to be compensated in part by the German indemnity. If they are asked to adopt a policy of consideration towards their recent enemies, in order to prevent the creation of another economic Frankenstein, may they not ask that consideration be shown towards them. The French owe vast sums of money to England and to the United States. This debt was incurred in prosecuting the war. If the French relinquish part of the expected indemnity, the burden of their own debts will weigh more heavily upon them. May not the French ask why they should be so tender to their enemies and so hard on themselves?

"There is only one answer to this question. The Allies must consider the problem in common. International war debts must be settled with regard to the best interests of all. As a matter of fact, France and Italy could hardly pay their war debts to Great Britain and the United States in the form which these war debts now are, with interest and even compound interest piling up at a fearful rate. I am not ready to say that there should be a cancellation of debts. Before making any contributions to an international settlement we may well wish to satisfy ourselves that the beneficiaries of that action are adopting sane fiscal policies of their own—as to their debtors, as to taxation and as to military expenditures. But we should be vigilant to seize, if not create, an opportunity for contributing to a reasonable settlement of the abnormal international debts and credits which were created under the emergency of war and without regard to capacity of repayment would involve."

TWO COURSES OF ACTION

"Does not that mean that the American people must pay the bill?"

"Well, we have two courses of action open to us. We are a creditor nation, and we may insist that our debtors pay us in full. If we do, our debtors will be forced to dump their goods upon the American market in immense

What Was In The Beginning? Still A Question That Interests Not Only Scientists, But Practically All Thinking People

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS
(Eminent Astronomer and Writer on Topics of Scientific Interest)

What was at the beginning of things? What preceded the nebula and set it spinning and whirling into reels and rigs and balls? What stirred the primal electricity and eddied it into electrons, and taught the electrons to marry into atoms, and inspired the atoms with desire to combine into molecules, and out of the molecules made the matter of the nebulae, and from that the suns, worlds, comets, meteors, together with all the glory of growing, swimming, walking, running, flying, thinking, talking, loving, hating, life? Nay, what was before the universal electricity itself, and made even it?

When we were Sunday school children (those of us who had the luck) we used to read under the pointing of the scented-gloved finger of a beautiful young lady teacher who thrilled our little souls these mysterious words:

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made through Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made"—followed by equally strange words about light, life and darkness.

Because when I was very young these words of St. John's gospel were driven as deep as the alphabet into my memory they have remained with me, and whenever they cross my mind the buzzing and murmuring rise again from the "Sabbath school" benches, in the bright, odorous Summer Sunday morning atmosphere. But the words have acquired a more definite meaning now.

REASON WAS FIRST

At the 1920 meeting of the American Philosophical Society, as I read, Dr. Paul Haupt, of Johns Hopkins University, affirmed that the verse I have quoted above should read, "In the beginning was Reason. The Greek word "logos" denotes both "word" and "reason." Logic is the science of reasoning, and, according to the Stoics, reason was the active principle in the formation of the universe.

Putting this interpretation upon the meaning of "the Word" in the whole passage, we find the statement to be that the universe, and everything that is, was made through reason, for reason is expressly identified with God—"and the Word (reason) was with God and the Word was God."

There are two things to be remarked about this—First, that, as far as it goes, it shows that the Gospel tells us nothing more about cosmogony, the early history of creation, than Greek philosophy had already told, but simply adopts the Stoic doctrine, and, second, that there is nothing in the Gospel contradictory to the teaching of science, which affirms that the universe as the abode of life, and life in its material forms, constituting the physical population of the universe, are the product of an orderly development or evolution, the logical offspring of reason.

Every little while I get a letter expressing the misgivings of some good man or woman who seems to be still buried in the mystery of the early Sunday school readings and who feels that there is moral wrong in following the advances of science when they tend to upset old-established theological tenets about the method and manner of creation.

I would refer inquirers of this sort to such results as critical scholarship has attained in the case of the mistranslated statements of St. John about the beginning of all things. The object of that scholarship has not been to discredit anything that the Scriptures contain, but to discover the real meaning of their statements.

SCIENCE AND TRUTH

There is no more devout slave to absolute truth than the scientific investigator. He will throw his own dearest and most hardly achieved results overboard if he finds them erroneous. He has no object whatever except to know the exact truth as it really is. If he is accused of error in seeking the truth solely along the line which reason opens to him he may reply to a theological objector: "What other method can you offer me? Your own authority avers that 'all things were made through Reason,' and without Reason was not anything made that was made."

The Bible affirms that man was created in the image of God. Is there not, then, a special significance in the fact that man is the only inhabitant of the earth who is certainly endowed with the faculty of reasoning?

If any lower animals possess this power it can only be a faint glimmering, a first suggestion; in man alone it becomes truly God-like. But if the universe was made through reason, then something of reason must exist in all parts of it. In a more developed state we may recognise that the moral law itself is a higher form of reason, nearer to its perfection in God.

Born 1915—Still Existing.

Today — By Arthur Brisbane

Say to young Americans, "Themistocles saved Greece by making the Greeks rely on ships and do their fighting on the water," young people will answer, "I am tired of Themistocles. I had enough of him in school." But say, "White, the hard Chicago fighter, was knocked out by Benny Leonard, the little Jewish cyclone, last Monday night, because White, when he was down, couldn't think." Then youth will listen.

Prize Fighter White, knocked to the floor when he had almost won the battle, should have laid still, while the referee counted nine, letting his heart rest, collecting his senses after the knockdown blow, asking himself, "What mistakes did I make?", planning just how to resume the fight.

That is what Benny Leonard would have done if he had been knocked down. He would have devoted nine seconds to thinking, then, getting up, he would have fought better than before.

Mr. White can fight but he can't think, especially after a knockdown blow. He jumped to his feet in half a second, instead of lying still for his allotted nine seconds, thinking out what mistakes he had made. That was the end of him.

The moral is, when you get a knock-down blow, when things go wrong, when you find yourself at or in danger of being flattened, do a little thinking. Blame yourself, ask yourself what mistakes you have made. Don't foolishly blame the world, for it will always knock you down if it can, exactly as Mr. Leonard will always knock down his opponent.

It is interesting to see the name Roosevelt on a Presidential ticket, and in the second place, where the name Roosevelt originally started out toward the Presidency. If Theodore came back he might exclaim "Copy cat;" he certainly wouldn't like it.

Mr. Koenigsberg, learned chief of the International News Association, says, "Don't underestimate the value of Roosevelt's name on that ticket. At least three hundred thousand men, living in the backwoods, coming to town once in three months, will vote for Franklin Roosevelt, thinking they are voting for the original Roosevelt, not knowing that he is dead."

That's an interesting comment on free and independent government, and there is truth in it. For the deeper his ignorance the more a man objects to information and the less inclined he is to ask for the truth.

The ancient and honorable organisation of Elks, led by their "grand exalted ruler," inspired by their "grand esteemed leading knight, grand esteemed loyal knight, grand esteemed lecturing knight," etc., are in Chicago. And everywhere you see posted up the magic letters, "B. P. O. E." The meaning of those magic letters is "Be posted on everything" An ambitious program, and never to be realised. No human brain is big enough or is long enough to be posted on everything. Nevertheless, it is a good program. Little humans must "aim high to shoot low," as the colored gentleman said when he first asked Grover Cleveland to make him Librarian of Congress, then admitted that he couldn't read, and really expected to be appointed a janitor.

While the Elks are in Chicago, the important cities of the United States, especially New York, should send commissions to report Chicago's method of making an entire city co-operate in a big welcome. New York, which has seen Fifth Avenue deteriorate from one of the handsomest streets in the country to one of the ugliest, could learn something by studying Michigan avenue, which, in the language of Walter Howey, editor of the Herald and Examiner, has "risen from deuce to ace in a few years."

It is one of the three handsomest streets in the whole world, the other two being in Paris and Budapest. Chicago knows how to use a great street, how to make it the beautifully decorated show window of a great city.

The Meadows Manufacturing Company built a new plant at Bloomington, Ill. They invited a clergyman to open the plant with an old-fashioned prayer meeting. The meeting was a success—good omen for the plant.

It is a good idea to express gratitude earnestly and often. Nathan Straus, intelligent philanthropist, grateful for what he has received, and especially grateful for what he has been able to do for the children of others, begins every prayer with these words: "Lord, you know how grateful I am, I don't need to tell you about it." Could you suggest a better beginning for a successful man's prayer?

Germany's Indemnity Payment And America's Economic Problem

than that, they in their turn will press their debtors in order to exact the last penny from them. Which means that those nations will also make an assault on our markets in order to pay off what they owe. We will thus face a general bombardment of goods from the industrial nations of the world which may strain our industrial organisation to the breaking point.

"But we can choose another course. We may show greater conciliation and agree to a readjustment of the international indebtedness. We may seemingly forego what is our strict due, but we would gain immensely in prestige from the restoration of normal trade movements.

"If we wish the world to return to normal economic life, we must not shirk our part. America is the crux of the economic and financial situation. An attitude of aloofness makes it excessively difficult for the nations of Europe to settle their affairs. It threatens seriously to retard the movement of the entire world towards political reorganisation and economic reconstruction. We cannot commit ourselves to such a policy. We must realise our tremendous responsibility to ourselves and to the world."

Siccawei Weather Reports

10.—The typhoon lingers to the South of the Loochoos, slow or recurving; the evening observations lead to think that may be a second center, further in the South, the wind veering anew from NW to N and freshening at Naha. Variable and light breezes along our coasts. Higher temperature but fine day at Shanghai. The weather clears up at noon at Formosa.

11.—Weather damp and overcast with thick clouds. The pressure is slowly decreasing. Very light breezes, mostly from ESE, shifting to WSW, later on.
